Majority Impossible, So Interest Centers on Fate of Radical Combine.

SECOND ELECTION NOW ON

Government's Warning Against "Red Peril" Falls on Unhearing Ears - Candidates of "Block" Opposed.

BERLIN, Jan. 20 .- (Special)-In 77 of the electoral districts of Germany supplementary elections for Reichstag candidates were held today. They will be followed by elections in additional districts Monday and in 34 others next

The interest with which the people of the empire are awaiting the results is even keener than it was before the main elections, for it is these contests which will decide whether Germany has come to a turning point in its political history.

Differences Plainly Marked.

The line of cleaveage between the "blue-and-black block," or the Conservative-Center coalition, and the com-bined Liberal, Progressive and Social-ist parties is more clearly marked than ever before. Leaders of the progressive parties, including representatives of some of the greatest industrial centers in the country, are openly appealing to the voters to support the Socialists against the block candidates. Neither Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's personal efforts to check the radical movement nor the government's warnings to the public to heware of the ings to the public to beware of the "Red Peril" have been of any effect.

Hope Is to Destroy Conlition. The public realizes that the Socialists whatever gains they may make, cannot get a majority in the Reichstag, and attention is concentrated on the ques-tion whether the block, with its com-bination of agrarian, feudal and bubination of agrarian, feudal and bu-reaucratic elements, can be destroyed and a Liberal majority be formed in its stead. Computations made today indicate that the radical groups are virtually certain of 144 seats, but whether they can elect the 65 addi-tional candidates necessary to make a bare majority is still problematical. The Conservatives are fighting des-perately to retain control of Parlia
