Delightful Days, These, for Spring Shopping

Extract From Her Letter to a Friend -On my way down town this morning, I met Jack. He is just back from a timber-cruising trip-what ever that is-so I dragged him along and insisted that he accompany me shopping. I had a long list that took me to every nook and corner of the store, and it would have made you laugh to see Jack watching the women crowding the different departments around tables piled high with Removal Bargains, You know, dear, I always preferred this store, for I don't like to be approached every minute and asked "Are you satisfied?" "Did you find what you were looking for?" In this store, there is always a pleasant smile and a "Thank you," and such a willingness to show things, that shopping is delightful. Jack caught the fever, too. Passing the Men's Furnishing Section he was struck with some very attractive ties, shirts and other things at Removal Prices. I left him there while I rushed upstairs to the Lingerie Section. When I returned he had just finished his purchases, and exclaimed, "Well, now, I understand why these big stores are so attractive to women. There is certainly a most substantial saving on every thing you buy." .

-I told Jack sales were all right as far as this store was concerned, because every time they held a sale you were sure to find it just as advertised. You know that, dearie.

-Well, I must close now. Jack is coming soon, and we are going to take a tramp over the hills. I may have something interesting to write you.
