STUDENTS WILL ENTERTAIN

Visitors' Day, April 26, at Corvallis to Be Big Event.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, April 26.—(Special.)—Friday, April 26, the occasion of the Oregon and Portland Business Men's excursion to Oregon Agricultural College, the commonwealth's great school of applied science, will be visitors' day at the college in every sense of the word. The "Open House" signs will be replaced by "Gut-bell" posters and student pedestrians will surrender the college paths to visiting automobiles.

Graduates, former students and old friends of the college, who accompany the business men, if returning after an absence of but a single year, will be astonished at the extensive improvements indicated by the addition of new buildings, completion of cement walks about the college quadrangle and along the north front of the campus. The marvellously increased attendance. Those who will visit O. A. C. for the first time next Friday, inspecting the buildings and seeing the improvements in their work, will be surprised, on the one hand, at the apparent greatness of the institution, and, on the other hand, amazed to find that the thousands of students can be handled with such modest equipment.

"Open House" Will Be Kept.

While the excursionists are the guests of the college no effort will be spared that can aid in making their visit pleasant and interesting. All of the 37 departments of the college will keep open house for the "visitors," as it were, without the usual regular routine of class work. Those who are particularly interested along some special line will be at liberty to spend the entire day, or as much of it as they wish, in the department which appeals most to them, while a regular program has been arranged by the college authorities for those who wish to visit the various laboratories, shops and college farm. Officers of the cadet regiment will serve as guides, each of four being assigned to a party of five. The programme begins at 9:30 in the morning when the visitors will be treated to an indoor automobile tour through the college grounds, which is one of the largest in the United States.

After the inspection of the army the Domestic Science laboratories will be visited, where the girls will be seen busy themselves with the preparation of the seven-course banquet at which the business men will be invited to dine in the evening.

Students Will Pack Fruit.

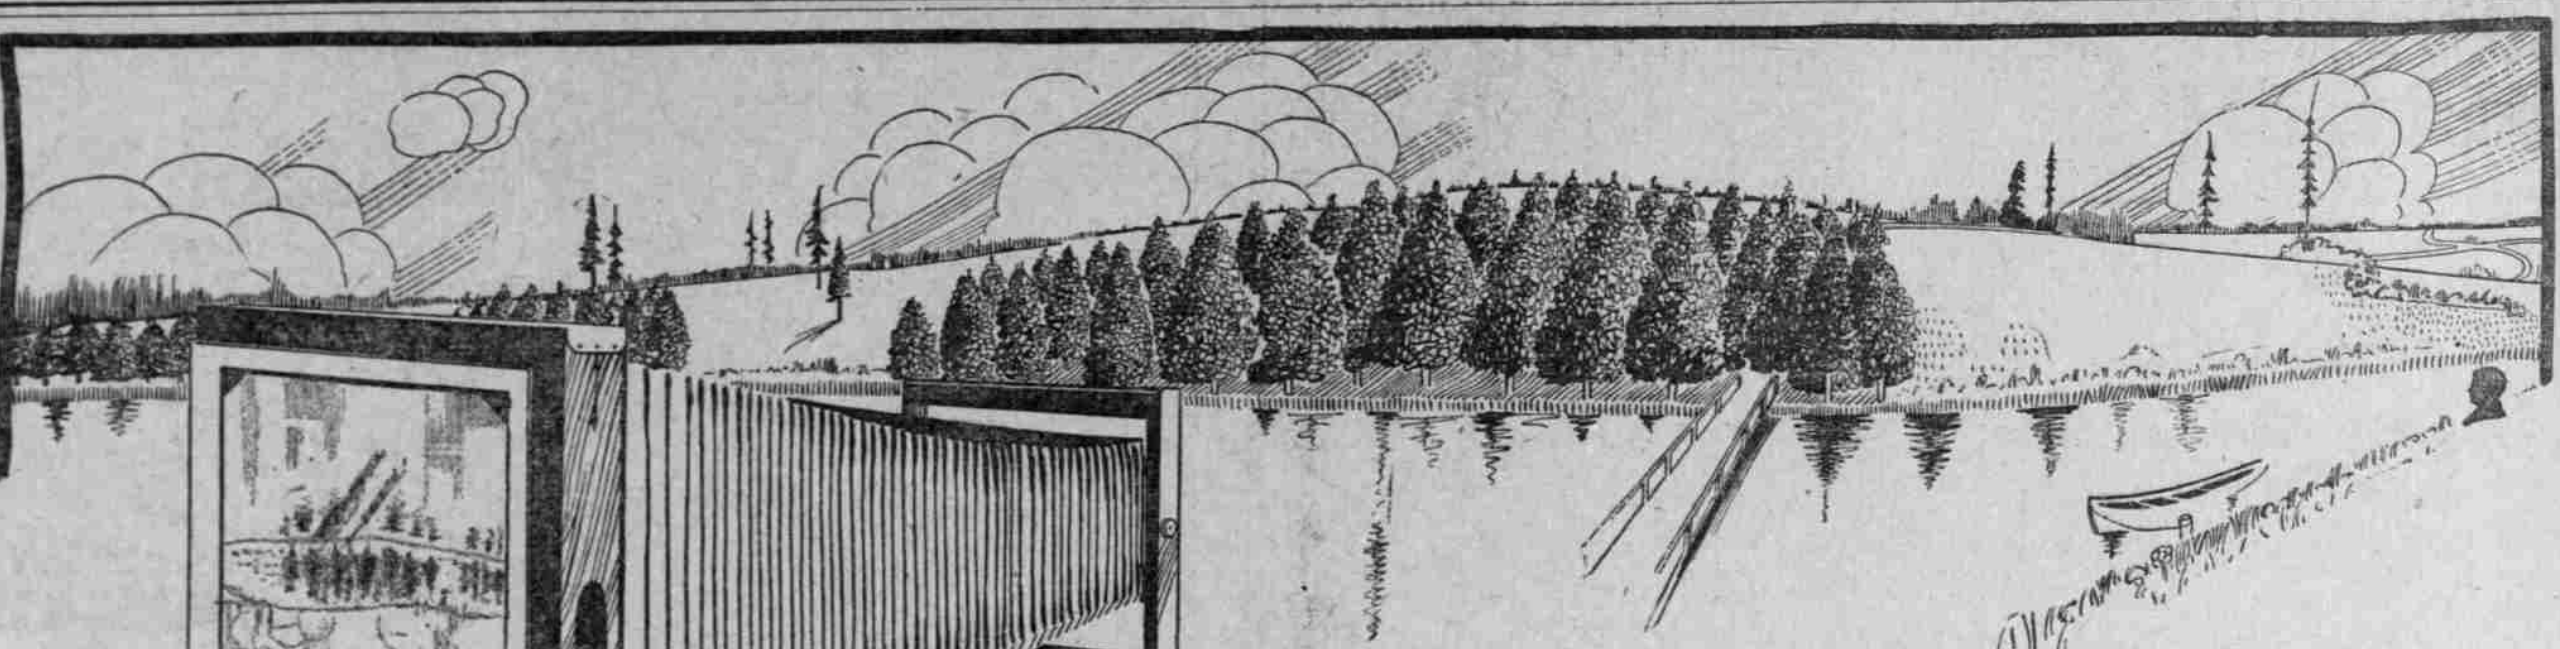

From 10:30 to 12:00 M. the classrooms of Agricultural Hall will be visited, where students will be engaged in sorting and packing fruit, in the study of grafting, budding and the various other methods of plant propagation. There will also be in session classes studying the preparation of sprays and the manipulation of spray pumps. In this connection, also, any who are interested in the study of crop pests will have an opportunity to attend an illustrated lecture on the subject and observe how the students learn to investigate by investigating.

In the art department the work of the O. A. C. students will be on exhibition as well as several sets of drawings from other schools of architecture.

The School of Commerce will be of particular interest to the business men inasmuch as the equipment and comprehensive courses of study enable the student to receive in college valuable experience in business methods and accounting.

A visit to the domestic art department will reveal the mysteries of basket making, fancy weaving, dressmaking and millinery.

BRITONS FEAR MORMONS

RESENTMENT AGAINST SECT IS STRONGLY AROUSED.

Good-Looking Girls Sought for Immoral Purposes Asserted—Drastric Measures Are Expected.

MANCHESTER, April 20.—(Special.)—Resentment against Mormon activity is again finding expression in the English midlands and northern counties, where missionaries of the Latter Day Saints, although for many years the use of such halls has been granted without demerit for conferences and public meetings of every sect.

The Mormon leaders accompany their latest applications by written statements that polygamy has been abandoned in Utah, and offer $1000 reward to anyone who can produce evidence of any instance of an English girl who had been induced to go to Utah for polygamous purposes.

This challenge has in no way allayed the fears of Manchester citizens, who are indignant at the house-to-house campaign carried on by Mormon emissaries for some months past. The method is to call and leave some tracts at a house, then to return a few days later in the hope that the literature has produced results.

Rev. W. J. Canton, rector of St. Margaret's Church, Whalley Range, is one of the most active and stalwart opponents of Mormonism, and he meets their denial of polygamy with scornful incredulity. "Many girls from Manchester, Liverpool and the neighboring districts," he declares, "have been enticed from their homes and situations by Mormon missionaries, to discover too late that while Mormonism may have been purged of many of its grosser evils, polygamy still exists, and that when they arrive in Salt Lake City they have no choice but to accept what is virtually a form of slavery."

Another clergyman of the Church of England, Rev. J. Williams, of Bury, is also on the warpath. He declares that the Mormon missionaries only visit houses where good-looking women are to be found, and he has invoked the aid of the police in trying to rid the town of the missionaries. The young men of the various religious organizations have promised him their co-operation with a view to making Bury too hot for the Mormons.

Several appeals have again gone to the Home Office, invoking official help in suppressing the propaganda, but the Government's programme is already too congested with over-due business, and there is no likelihood of parliamentary assistance, even if there was a strong body of opinion in the House of Commons in favor of it. So the matter is left to local action in the districts most affected, where, to judge from the present temper of the citizens, such action soon will find drastic expression, especially in Manchester, which, as the center of Mormon activity in England, has been described as "the Mormon monastery."

TERMINAL POOL LIKELY

AGREEMENT BETWEEN ROADS SAID TO BE IN SIGHT.

Plans for New Union Passenger Station Call for Building Facing Hoyt Street.

Tentative articles of agreement providing for the early consolidation of the various railroad terminals in Portland and a subsequent construction of a Union passenger station are said to have been signed between representatives of the O.-W. R. & N. Co. and the Hill interests with the result that only the acceptance of William Spruille, president of the Southern Pacific, is required to carry the plans into execution.

When Mr. Spruille was in Portland last week to prepare for the electrification of the West Side and Yamhill divisions between Portland and McMinnville he discussed the terminal situation with J. D. Farrell, president of the O.-W. R. & N. Co., and Carl R. Gray, president of the North Bank and other Hill roads in Oregon, and it is understood that an agreement was reached which provides for "pooling" the property of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company and of the North Bank and allied interests and the utilization of this property for terminal and station grounds. Mr. Gray now is in St. Paul conferring with the Hills on this and several other questions affecting the Portland situation.

The proposed terminal pool will include property between the present Union Depot and Hoyt street. The railroad interests have had this tied up for several years. It is the intention to have the new passenger station built facing Hoyt street and extending from Sixth street to Park street. This will necessitate changing the west Broadway bridge approach to Park street from Seventh street, but the railroads, it is said, are prepared to ask that this be done.

Worlein Says "Interests" Have Right to "Know" Candidates.

J. E. Worlein, special agent for the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company addressing members of the Transportation Club at their smoker at the Multnomah, Friday night, declared that he believed the railroad interests should enter the field of politics and insist upon knowing definitely from every candidate just how he stood on corporations.

"Our interests have just as much right," he said, "to find out where the candidate for Governor or legislator stands on corporation matters, as the labor unions have to safeguard their interests by entering politics and placing their men in the field."

F. T. Griffith, general attorney for the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, urged the necessity of positive efforts on the part of railroad men to counteract by open and courteous treatment of their patrons, that impression that, he declared, is general
