WEBSTER PORTRAITS WIN HEARTS OF PORTLANDERS

Artist Paints Miniatures and Portraits of Well-Known Oregon Men and Women.

Dr. Angus B. Gillis. Mrs. Angus Bernard Gillis.

Mrs. Chas. A. Prescott.

Portlanders are showing great interest in the portraits of Oregonians, painted by Frederick Webster, of Chicago, who came to the Coast last July. After having made miniatures of Mrs. Edward C. Mears and her daughters he gave a public loan exhibit in the parlors of the Bowers Hotel. It was attended by hundreds and resulted in a commission to Mr. Webster to paint the following portraits: Judge Thomas G. Halley, Dr. Clarence S. Nichols, Mrs. Edward Giles Powers, of Decatur, Ill.; Alexander Nibley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Prescott, Ellis Hughes and his grandson, Samuel Martin; W. J. Van Schuyver and grandson, James Ill.; Mme. Barker and others.

Webster went to Salem late in October and has since occupied his time making a number of portraits in oil of A. Bush, Sr., a well-known pioneer and banker. Webster's conception of this fine old gentleman are a joy to both his family and friends. From an artistic standpoint, as well as for the marvelous likeness of Mr. Bush the work is a wonder. The framing of the portraits are unusual, being of carved wood, designs made by the artist from Oregon grape, oak and fir, found growing at the old Bush home. The carving was executed by Mrs. Webster.

While in Salem Webster also painted a portrait of Dr. Angus B. Gillis, Surgeon-General of the Oregon National Guard, and a miniature of Mrs. Gillis, also one of her mother, Mrs. Krebs. Mr. and Mrs. Webster are now at the Multnomah Hotel, where they will remain until the end of April. As the time is too limited for a public show, those interested may see the portraits any afternoon by appointment.

From Portland the artist goes to Pasadena to paint a life-sized oil portrait of Mrs. Elizabeth Boynton Harbert, a well-known writer, who is 87 years old. This is to grace the living-room of the fine new building now under construction by the Women's Club of Evanston, Ill., of which Mrs. Harbert was the founder and first president.

This is Webster's first visit to the Coast. His work, however, always has been enthusiastically received in the Eastern cities and in Europe. Webster is an American, but his early training as a painter was obtained at the Royal Academy, Munich, Germany, under such masters as Hetric Limbach and Von Karlbach. While in England he was an associate of the famous painter-etcher, Alexander Haig. Mr. and Mrs. Webster sail in August for a year abroad, the artist having commissions in England, Germany and France.

His home is in Evanston, Ill.
