WASHINGTON, June 1.—(Special.)—According to a statement issued at the Taft hureau, President Taft has 583 delegates in the Chicago convention. This number would be 45 more than enough to nominate. The Taft bureau concedes to Colone! Roosevelt 427 delegates, or 113 less than enough to nominate.

Only 22 delegates remain to be n. six at large in Ohio, six at large Arizona and 10 in South Dakota. All legates will have been chosen by "The methods which Mr. Roosevelt and his managers have pursued to attain their ends is amply reflected by the contests now pending before the Republican National committee," said Representative McKiniey, in charge of the Total bureau.

"Mr. Roosevelt is contesting the seats of more than 260 delegates before that of more than 300 delegates before that body and the filmsy pretense on which he is making his contests will be shown to the country when the contests are heard by the committee. These contests will be decided on their merits by the ruling body of the party.

"The friends of the President, knowns the facts as they are have no besting the facts as they are, have no hesi-tancy in saying that in every contest they have both the moral and legal right to the votes of the delegates they claim in support of President Taft. The high-handed methods of Mr. Roosevelt and his managers, almost invariably erile in their execution, can have no nding before any body of fair-nded, conscientious men.

Things Said to Be Weighed. 'Mr. Roosevelt well realizes that he ow coming face to face with his party at Chicago and that what as done and said in this campaign he has done and said in this campaign will be weighed carefully in the balsave. He and his managers have conducted themselves in this campaign without any regard whatever for the Constitution, the laws of the land or the rules of the contest as laid down by the Republican National committee.
"On the stump Mr. Rooseveit himself has said nothing good either for the party, its President or principles or teaders. In the Republican National convention the party will be called upon to consider these matters carefully, and Mr. Rooseveit will, no doubt, receive all the consideration to which he is entitled as a minority candidate
in that convention."

CHICAGO, June 1.—David W. "A fight over the temporary chair-manship, both in the National commit-tee and on the floor of the convention is certain," said Mr. Mulvane. OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, June 1.-When, on March 4, 1913, the Taft Administration comes to 1913, the Taft Administration comes to a close, no leas than 36 United States Senators who saw Mr. Taft take the oath of office in the Senate Chamber on that stormy and memorable March 4, 1903, will have passed out of public life. Twenty-eight of the number are already gone. Some have died, others were retired by will of their constituencies or their State Legislatures, and others retired voluntarily.

encies or their State Legislatures, and others retired voluntarily.

It is doubtful if any Administration has witnessed so many changes in the United States Senate. Certainly no Administration has zeen so may men of power and prominence eliminated from the greatest legislative body in the United States. For among those who will be missed when a new President is inaugurated are the men who dent is inaugurated are the men who, at the beginning of Mr. Taft's Administration, were actually in charge of the Senate, and rightfully known as the managers of that body.

"Old Guard" Has Passed.

"Old Guard" Has Passed.

The Taft Administration has witnessed the passing of the "Old Guard," that group of Senators who for years were all-powerful. It has seen the Republican majority of the Senate dwindle from 27 to seven; it has seen the "progressives" increase their number from eight to 13, but, what is more important has seen 14 becomes to the contract of t LECOMPTE DAVIS TO APPEAR important, has seen 14 Democrats take the place held by Republicans four years ago. A gain of eight seats by the Democrats will change the political complexion of the Senate by March 4, next, and such a change is not at all improbable.

In some respects and in some in-stances the Senate unquestionably is stances the Senate unquestionably is the gainer by changes that have occurred. In other instances the reverse is true. And until all the new members have had a full and fair try-out it would be unjust to attempt to strike a balance. The fact remains, however, that some of the most powerful men the Senate has ever known have passed out of public life since Mr. Taft became President, and, measured by brains alone, these men have no equals among those who have come to don the toga. brothers, will be witnesses for the prosecution in the trial of Darrow for vesterday, after the testimony of Bert

With Aldrich retired Senator Hale, of Maine, second only to Aldrich in authority and in power. Both were Senators of long service, and both largely owed their power to the fact that they were kept in the Senate term after term. Unlike Aldrich, however, Hale probably could not have been returned, for his state unexpectedly went Democratic, and his successor is of that faith. Hale's voluntary retirement is but another tribute to his political seu-ISSUE IS WITH COMMITTEE but another tribute to his political scumen. He saw a storm coming, and avoided it.
