DECEIVED BY SO-CALLED SUPERFLUOUS HAIR "CURES"

Famous Doctors Charge Deception.

A number of eminent physicians recently made independent and exhaustive tests of the various depilatories and unanimously decided that with exception they did not operate on the right principle, neither were they made of the proper ingredients, therefore could not accomplish the purpose for which they were intended.

Tests also proved that these preparations were actually injurious. While no perceptible harm was noticeable with the first use, after a few days a slight skin trouble, the real injury manifested itself after more frequent and continued use. Furthermore, it was demonstrated that when the surface hair was removed by them, it grew out again more rapidly, coarser and stiffer than before, consequently rendering each subsequent removal more difficult.

It is astonishing and surprising that women will take the risk of disfigurement by using unknown and untested means for removing superfluous hair. In spite of all warnings, it seems that some are always willing to make "one more try," not stopping to consider that in using these worthless depilatories, it will be only a question of time before they will have to resort to the use of the razor, because eventually the hair will be strong enough to remove it without ruining the skin.

It must be borne in mind that unscrupulous fakirs have always taken advantage of afflicted women's superstition, depending solely upon extravagant and sensational claims to extort from them sometimes exorbitant prices for their so-called "cures." Usually makers of worthless, poisonous pastes, powders, fake "beauty article" recipes and so-called liquid "cures" resort to publishing testimonials procured for a money consideration from one or two physicians of questionable standing, or from some unknown woman who is dubbed a "great society leader." More than likely the preparations were never used by the writers of the so-called testimonials.

Don't be deceived or deluded by alluring and impossible claims of impostors. Tell any one of them that DeMiracle Chemical Company will forfeit Five Thousand Dollars if it can be proven that their so-called superfluous hair "cures" ever eradicated one single growth of superfluous hair. There is one standard depilatory that dissolves hair, thereby taking the vitality out of it, consequently retarding and preventing an increased growth. It is DeMiracle, the one preparation noted by the physicians who made the tests. It is the only perfected, absolutely non-poisonous and thoroughly reliable method for removing superfluous hair. After all, the real test of merit is the test of time. DeMiracle was the largest selling depilatory ten years ago, and more of it has been sold each year since than the combined sales of all the questionable hair removers sold through the mails or otherwise. The mere fact that this dangerous preparation is short-lived does not alone constitute sufficient warning to avoid the use of any depilatory but that of proven merit.
