TO SAVE OLD IVY TREE OLD LAND MARK IS RAZED

Walker House, Built in 1849 by Missionary in Forest Grove, Loomed as Fire Trap, and Rare Shrub Was More Valued.

WALKER HOME BEFORE IT WAS TORN DOWN.

FOREST GROVE, Or., July 6.—(Special.)—The old Walker house, the first frame building to be constructed in Forest Grove, was torn down last week. This house was built in 1849 by Dr. Elkanah Walker, a missionary, who came to this section after the Whitman massacre. There were several log buildings, a church and four cabins, but this house was the first to be made from sawed material in this section of the Tualatin Plains. The lumber was secured by Dr. Walker from the George Furnside Mill, located at the foot of Gales Peak along the Gales Creek, about three miles from this place. In the construction of the house it was necessary to call upon the services of Dr. George H. Atkinson, missionary superintendent of the old Oregon territory, who was the only man in the section able to put up the frame. The house stood on the northern portion of the Walker donation claim, which comprised a section of what is now the city of Forest Grove. There are but a few acres of the old homestead left, upon which Samuel T. Walker, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Walker, is now living. It is one of the most valuable pieces of property in this city, due to its excellent location. Alongside the old house is an oak tree overgrown with ivy, which has gained the distinction of "the old ivy tree," as it is the only one of its nature in this locality. The ivy slip was brought from Goat Island, at Niagara Falls, in 1879, by Mrs. Walker, and planted at the base of the oak. For fear that the old house might catch on fire and thus destroy the ivy tree, it was thought best to tear it down.

BONDS PILE UP LABORS; TREASURER CALLS HELP

Compliment Paid to Harbormaster When Unitemized Claim Is Allowed. Additional Market Inspector Finds No Flies.

SIX MILLION DOLLARS in improvement bonds have been issued during the fiscal year. This fact was developed during a session of the ways and means committee last week, when City Treasurer Adams was asking for an additional clerk to keep up the heavy routine in the office. The city is progressing in the line of improvements, for which bonds are issued as fast as is well for the financial conditions. City Engineer Harburt says that Portland has been laying too much pavement and digging too many sewers and performing other municipal improvement work to last long. Cities much larger than Portland, he points out, do not lay so many pavements in a year. In other words, he believes there should be a steady, but not too heavy line of work going on every year. The bonded indebtedness is shoved up high by the many street improvements which have been made in the past few years and will continue to go higher as the city expands and more sewers are required. Bonds are issued for ten years, bearing 6 per cent interest. It devolves upon the City Treasurer to collect all of this money and the work is a great one for his office. For this reason, the ways and means committee recommended another permanent clerk for him.

A high compliment was paid to Harbormaster Speler by the ways and means committee members last week when they recommended the payment of a general claim sent in by him for $125 without requiring specific items. This is unusual. Harbormaster Speler has for five years expended from his own funds certain sums for special work, such as stenographic work, making up reports for out-of-the-city calls, etc., and recently decided that he would not do so in the future, but would submit a bill for it. Additional Market Inspector Singer had an experience last week which caused him to hurry to the City Hall and seek advice from Mayor Rusk. The additional inspector was passing a fruit stand and noticed that the proprietor had no screening over the fruit, as provided by an ordinance recently passed by the Council. "Why don't you put screens over that fruit?" demanded the additional inspector, with considerable indignation. "Why do you ask such a foolish question?" the proprietor shot back. "Where are the flies? Do you see one fly, sir? Show me just one fly and I will put screening on."

Additional Inspector Singer for once was nonplussed. He did not know what to do, for he tried in vain to find a fly and could not. He had read the ordinance carefully, but it said nothing about whether there must be flies around before fruit must be covered. He decided to see the Mayor on this important subject. Neither Singer nor the Mayor would make any statement after Singer saw the Mayor about it. It is proposed to obtain for city employees a lower rate for premiums on their bonds. When the Elks wished to appoint 75 of their number special policemen, the charter required a bond of $1000 each. The bonds firms quoted a regular rate of $4 a head. Councilman Burgard and other who were interested succeeded in reducing the price to $2. It is now proposed to obtain a blanket bond, covering all the considerable sum of money for the employees, some of whom have to pay their own premiums.

Whether the City Council has the right under the charter to create a recreation commission and appropriate funds for its use is a question before the City Attorney for an opinion. Under the charter, all parks are given into the charge of the Park Board, consisting of four members, of which the Mayor is chairman ex-officio. Until this summer the men have been handling everything in this line without assistance or suggestions from various sections, who chanced to become interested in some phase of the work for reasons of their own.

This summer, however, members of the various women's organizations and other public-spirited bodies have asked that an advisory commission be created to make special investigation for the development of recreation features in connection with the parks. Several meetings of men and women who were to be named as the members of the new commission have been held at the City Hall, but now they and the members of the Park Board are awaiting the opinion of the City Attorney on the subject. Public dancing and other amusements have been prohibited in Portland, through the efforts of the police public safety bureau and it is the wish of those in favor of the recreation commission that there be some other features provided to take their place. This is the work they wish to take up with a view, as they say, to making suggestions along this line to the Mayor and members of the Park Board. One woman in this town has a poor opinion of the City Attorney. She entered the office at the City Hall last week and asked to see Mr. Grant. City Attorney Grant appeared wearing his most pleasant smile. "I want you to defend my divorce case," said the woman. "But, my dear madame," cooed Mr. Grant, "that does not concern my department's jurisdiction; you must engage a lawyer of your own. We are too busy guarding the rights of the people to give any time or attention to divorce cases, as much as we would like."

"Guarding the people's rights, eh?" snapped the woman. "Guarding the people's rights!" and out the door she dashed. Mayor Rusklight and members of the Park Board are making good progress in the extension of the Terwilliger boulevard. Much of the property required for this extension has been acquired, either through outright purchase or by condemnation proceedings. Bids have been opened for the grading, Glebsch & Joplin being the low bidder. The boulevard will be hurried to completion as rapidly as possible and will become one of the most beautiful features of the city's parks and boulevards system.

IDAHO'S INTEREST PILES UP

State's Earnings for Quarter Ending June 30 Over $17,000.

BOISE, Idaho, July 6.—(Special.)—Idaho has an interest-earning capacity of $190 a day, and during the last quarter, ending June 30, 1912, earned $17,286.64 on money that was loaned out by State Treasurer O. V. Allen. This total represents the interest earnings of one quarter since the depository law went into effect. During the present month the state will pay out nearly $600,000. The largest item will be approximately $200,000 from the school fund to the several counties. Idaho is not lacking when it comes to available cash, for it has a total of $1,813,752.72 in its treasury in various funds. Filing fees from Republican and Democratic political aspirants amounted to $162.60.
