BLUE RIVER DISTRICT SHOWING ANIMATION

A. S. Wells of Portland Is Examining Mining Prospects—Dan McAllen Writes of the Pains and Pleasures of Camp Life.

McKenzie River Near Blue River City

BLUE RIVER, Or., July 20.—(Special.)—New life has taken possession of the Blue River mining district. F. E. Litzberg, an experienced mining man from Colorado, has instilled a spirit of activity into the entire mining region. A. S. Wells, of Portland, an experienced mining engineer and chemist, is on the ground examining mining properties and making tests of ores from several mines. Transportation facilities are sadly needed. Blue River mines are almost inaccessible. It costs $28 a ton from Blue River City to Springfield, the nearest railroad point. Add to that $5 a ton from the mines, then rail to Tacoma and smelter charges. All this has discouraged the mining industry and retarded development. A railroad is in contemplation from Eugene. When that time comes the Blue River group of mines and incidentally the fertile lands along its banks, McKenzie River will boom. Just now fishermen, tourists and some invalids are taxing the capacity of stagers and automobiles seeking pleasure, rest and relief. There are ample accommodations at Foley, Belknap Springs and McKenzie Bridge. A modern hotel has been erected at Blue River City. In fact accommodations for man, beast and auto are found all along the line.

Camp Is Cosmopolitan.
Here are to be found men from all walks in life. The professions, Army and Navy and the farm furnish recruits. Of course every mining camp has its nicknames. "Shorty" is a pretty lively fellow, always ready for a parade. Then there is Jack Evans, at one time a dry goods man and buyer for some large houses and a crack short stop and baseball catcher. He is in his element when he dons his overalls. It would send a thrill of pleasure running up your spine to hear Mr. Evans whistle his favorite opera.

Rev. W. B. Headlee is here and on the job as engineer and fireman at one of the mines. Mr. Headlee is a Methodist minister. For years he followed his calling in Indian Territory but found remuneration not sufficient—one year only $5. He decided to come to Oregon and take up a timber claim. The timber claim is worth $10,000.

Alex Booth, a well-informed mining man, is a firm believer in the Blue River district. Incidentally it may be stated that Mr. Booth is interested here. "Bill" Bailey is a strapping six-footer. He is an Oregon product, son of Smith Bailey, of trotting horse fame, a pioneer and reared on a farm but is prospected with the result that he located a valuable claim and is holding on to it. But it's the old story, lack of funds to develop the property.

Colonel "Bill" Nesmith, is a pioneer and the son of a pioneer. He is the life and soul of the community. To a certain extent camp life would be monotonous were it not for "Bill."

"Shorty" is at his old game, playing the phonograph. It is interesting to watch him with the smoky pipe in one side of his mouth, smoking and at the same time whistling the tune being played by the phonograph. "Shorty" scored in the German navy, afterward following a sailing, he visited many foreign countries. It is interesting to listen to him telling some of his ups and downs.

Cook Is a "Dandy."
The cook in this camp, a Mrs. Barker is a good one. This is not Mrs. Barker's first experience in a mining camp for she acted in a similar capacity in mines in Colorado, Mexico and Montana. She knows how to get to the heart of the miner and she certainly does it. The miner is willing to pay for the best no cheap picnic ham for him. Nothing short of a prime McKenzie River beef, the best ham and bacon, and vegetables in season. City folks may consider ice cream a luxury, not so here. We have ice cream frequently. Where and how do we get it? Without very much trouble I assure you. With ice and snow within a few hundred feet of here, milk, eggs, fresh from the ranch and sugar and an ice cream freezer, then a simple turn of the wrist, and there is your ice cream, pure and wholesome, free from the eye of the pure food inspector.

Now what do you think of life in the wilds, almost at the summit of the Cascade range of mountains? However, I will no doubt approve of. There is no booze allowed and the nearest booze point is Springfield, 50 miles from here. It was said that bootlegging was carried on and that moonshine was being manufactured for the purpose of destroying squirrels and cougars but all such talk was exploded when an army of deputies from the revenue office at Portland made a tour of inspection and found no evidence to warrant such statements. Yes, the party found an old still in a dry river bed with the name of an English firm and date 1842. It is presumed that the still was used by the early English settlers for medicinal purposes. One of the rangers is authority for the statement that Colonel Dunne, collector of internal revenue, headed the Portland posse, further Colonel Dunne was disguised in a suit of armor plate designed by President McKinley of the Williamson Iron & Steel Works. It takes one of these rangers to see things, to penetrate a disguise. Well, there goes the last call for dinner.

Y. M. C. A. LECTURE TODAY

R. H. Perkins Will Speak on "Neglected Children and Youth."
Continuing its discussion series on "Christianity at Work," the Portland Young Men's Christian Association will devote today's meeting to "Neglected Children and Youth." This is a topic in which the head of the religious work department, R. H. Perkins, is particularly interested. He has written several books on the general subject of juvenile delinquency.

Mr. Perkins will be one of the speakers of today's meeting, the other speaker being Philip E. Bauer, state parole officer. W. S. Hale, new superintendent of the Oregon state training school, was scheduled to speak, but will not be able to attend. E. M. Brown, assistant religious work director of the Y. M. C. A., will preside.

The discussion today, which will be held in the lobby, will be continued next Sunday. The speakers at that time will be John G. Kilpack and Rev. M. E. Snedeker.

Pasco Sued by Residents

PASCO, Wash., July 20.—(Special.)—A motion for a new trial in the case of the injunction against the city was argued before Judge Holcomb Tuesday evening. This is a case wherein various citizens endeavored to secure a permanent injunction against the city restraining it from installing an irrigation system purchased from the Pasco Reclamation Company. A temporary injunction was issued by the court commissioner about two weeks ago, but was dissolved by Judge Holcomb. The motion made Tuesday for a rehearing was also denied by the court.
