NESKOWIN, Or., July 27.—(Special)—Farthest south of the Tillamook County beaches, most primitive in its surroundings, latest in point of development and in many ways most attractive both scenically and on account of the superior opportunities it offers for outing diversions, is Neskowin, 30 miles south of Bayocean, along the shore and nearly 40 miles by automobile along the road through the Tillamook Valley and over the mountains.

Except for the little bay at Nestucca, there is no break in the coast line from Point Lookout to Cascade Head, a distance of 17 miles, and the trip might be made easily by automobile along the hard sand in about as many minutes. The beach is wide here and extends well up the side of the range of low hills which skirt the shore and form a barrier between the ocean and a beautiful little valley lying behind them and stretching away to the mountains, a mile or more eastward. The road to Neskowin, which lies along the sides of these mountains for nearly five miles, shortly after leaving Oretown, offers a wonderful panorama of attractive scenery.

Several hundred feet below one may see the narrow strip of fertile meadow land, watered by mountain streams, which widen here and there into pretty little lakes, and sheltered from the ocean by a low ridge. Just beyond this the white-capped breakers throw themselves forward over fully half a mile of gently sloping sand.

Outing Attractions Great.

The locality is curiously lonesome in atmosphere, undisturbed by sounds of complex civilization, and seems to offer attractions for a Summer's outing scarcely to be found at any other of the resorts along the ocean. Yet Neskowin has been the camping ground for many pleasure seekers from surrounding localities during the past 20 years.

The place has been known for a long time as the Salem camp ground, and was well known to visitors from all over Southeastern Oregon. Outside a select few, however, its attractions were kept more or less secret, for fear of their being exploited by aggressive promoters.

Neskowin is not being exploited even now. Visitors to the little hotel will be well entertained—that is, they will be given an excellent meal and a comfortable bed, but that is all. There are no crowds along the beautiful wide beach, and one may climb unmolested among the rocks of Cascade Head in search of starfish and crabs, or to investigate the wonderful caves which have been washed out by the waves. The streams from the hills and the pretty lakes are filled with fish, which have been little molested by rod enthusiasts, and cougar and bear come down at night to carry away goats, sheep and other animals from neighboring farms.

Deer are plentiful here, and come to feed with the stock in the meadows; trout may be obtained within an hour's tramp from the hotel; cod, sea bass and other deep-water fish may be secured just off the rocks of Cascade Head, near by; crabs are plentiful and clams are to be found in quantities in many varieties only a few miles away at Nestucca Bay. There is no suggestion of town life here, in spite of the number of people who live along the shore and on the ranches in the adjoining hills.

All Is Primitive.

Some idea of the primitive nature of the country may be obtained from the fact that only recently has a store been opened near Neskowin, and the proprietor, apparently without a neighbor within calling distance, claims that unsolicited business has netted him a profit averaging more than $100 a month. On Saturday nights a dance is held in the hall over the big garage, and this is attended usually by nearly 100 couples of merry farmers' boys and girls. The first impression of Neskowin as a town recalls the famous description of the old-fashioned New England village, with its hotel, blacksmith shop and general store, except that this place has no blacksmith shop.

One may reach Neskowin comfortably from Tillamook by automobile in an afternoon's run, with a short stop at Hebo for lunch and to stretch, and be in time to enjoy an exhilarating walk along the beach and a dip in the surf before supper. (N. B.—Take your bathing suit with you, because there will be none for rent at Neskowin.)

From Portland, the only automobile road to this section of the coast, according to the guide books, runs through Tigardville, Newberg and McMinnville, to Dolph, a distance of 77 miles, from which one has a choice of two routes; that by way of Hebo, along the Little Nestucca River, through Cloverdale to the mouth of Kiwanda Creek, a distance of 13 miles; and the road leading directly west from Dolph to Meda, a distance of nine miles. The former road, though longer, is smoother and more picturesque and is generally used by automobilists. The distance from Portland to Neskowin over this route, by way of Hebo, is 105 miles.

The present road from Hebo to Oretown is the one laid out by the farmers to connect their ranches and winds in and out among the hills, up over their sides and through deep cuts, much of the way planked and scarcely wide enough for a machine. At one place it doubles entirely around Nestucca Bay forming almost a complete loop. Plans for a new road have been prepared and the county, next year, will construct a broad turnpike across the flat land back of the bay to eliminate the loop and thus shorten the distance from Hebo to Oretown about nine miles. This change will not affect the road from Dolph as that route joins the other at Oretown.

Schoolhouse Sign Saver.

Newcomers to Oretown receive notice that they have reached a settlement from the sign on the schoolhouse. Not a house is in sight, but the size of the educational building indicates that there must be a fairly large population of young people within easy traveling distance of the place. This locality is the oldest settlement in Tillamook County. The first settlers came from the upper Willamette valley, about 40 miles eastward, many years ago.

Scarcely half a mile west of Oretown, a break in the hills gives one glimpse of the ocean. It is a startling picture. The ridge seems to open in front of one and leave no way forward but through space. The road apparently leads directly out over the edge of a precipice, which drops down several hundred feet onto the little plain with the ocean so near, that one imagines he might easily drop onto the wide beach. A sharp turn to the left brings one out, seemingly over the water and before the wonderful picture of hills, rising tier on tier to the south and east, and the ocean with its wide fringe of dashing breakers, sweeping in as if to egulf the pretty valley and lake land at our feet.

Five miles of gradually descending road along the sides of the hills bring one to the lower level. We pass the huge garage, two stores, a row of tents and are set down at the hotel. In front is Proposal Rock; to the left, Cascade Head. The view of the coast at other places is interrupted by the low hills which form the seawall. The air is full of sound; the salt breath of the ocean is in one's nostrils; we climb the hill nearby to look out over a wild scene of tossing, combing water, the waves breaking far off from shore and tumbling forward in a long surging line of foam.

Those versed in geology tell us that the low land back from the beach at one time was a little bay, guarded from the ocean except for a small opening and into which flowed the mountain streams. The section of high land between Proposal Rock and Cascade Head was evidently undermined by the sea. The sand now has washed over this new made shore and formed a wide beach through which project the stumps of trees which once grew upon the higher ground. At low water, these stumps are plainly visible and one may stand upon them with the incoming tide sweeping past his feet for 100 yards or more towards the shore.

Submerged Forest Seen.

This is the submerged forest. The stumps of trees are not petrified, but are covered with barnacles and sea growth, under which the wood is quite soft and spongy. The texture has become so changed by the action of the water that although it offers practically no resistance to the blade of one's knife, it cannot be cut away. The stumps are set close together and cover an area more than half a mile long and several hundred feet wide.

Proposal Rock stands isolated now, a great mass several acres in extent and covered with a heavy growth of timber. It can be reached at low tide, however, although in Winter the waves break completely over the top. The place was so named by the people of the locality on account of the disposition of romantic young men and maidens to climb to the summit, it being considered equivalent to an engagement for a young couple to visit the place together. The view from the top is romantic enough, to be sure, but one would imagine that most young men, having scaled the cliffs, would feel more eager to rest and eat a hearty lunch than to consider the burdens of matrimony. From the front, towards the sea, is an excellent "lover's leap," however, and it is possible desperate swains may have taken advantage of this in urging their suit. As the fair one would have had difficulty in getting back to shore alone, the threat of her escort to throw himself into the ocean would have compelled her to accept him in order to escape being marooned on the lonely place.

Only four miles farther south, around Cascade Head, one comes upon the beach again, along which it is 17 miles to Siletz Bay. There is a narrow trail across the point through the woods.

The natives about Neskowin will tell you stirring tales of bear hunting in these hills. Descriptions of how the wild animals often come down from the mountains to wander about the settlements and ranches, killing goats, sheep and cattle, almost make one afraid to leave his second-story window open at night while he is asleep.

Neskowin Is Awakening.

Only recently has the land about Neskowin been laid out for Summer resort purposes. In the plan, advantage has been taken of the natural beauties of the land, and cottages may be erected on the banks of the streams or on the seawall overlooking the ocean. The entire tract includes 150 acres. A number of cottages has already been erected, the finest being those of Dr. R. E. Lee Steiner, D. J. Foy and J. H. McCockle. There is a well-laid-out tent city there, and in Summertime this forms a large settlement.

Percy Canfield, of Oregon City and H. W. Little, of Tillamook, were registered at the hotel here Monday.

A large party of "hikers" passed through Bayocean Monday, taking the Henrietta to Garibaldi. They went in to Netarts from Tillamook, Sunday morning and walked up along the beach to this resort.

Among those from Bayocean who attended the opening at Bar View Saturday night were Arthur Cavill and Frank McClure, swimming instructors here.

Mrs. Stella von Jessen, wife of Professor von Jessen, was a guest here for a few days last week.

Elwood Wiles, who recently returned from a visit to the Potlatch convention in Seattle, spent the week-end here with his family.

W. M. Cake, of the firm of Cake & Cake, attorneys of Portland, was a visitor here the week-end.

Mrs. W. C. van Dersal entertained at cards Monday afternoon. Mrs. F. J. Reynolds, Miss Juell Reynolds and Mrs. M. J. O'Donnell were among the guests.

NEWPORT ENJOYS BIG WEEK

Auto Parties and Bathers Find Much Pleasure at Resort.

NEWPORT, Or., July 27.—(Special.)—The past week has been a delightful one at Newport and also a very interesting one. Beside the week-end crowd on Saturday, over 500 people came down on the Sunday excursion. The crowds of bathers found the water entirely satisfactory, while the larger crowds of spectators found interest in watching the excursion and fishing boats that came quite close to the breakers and then raced each other back to the harbor.

The weather has been ideal for motoring and a number of auto parties have arrived. The pathfinder, a Flanders 20, starting from here made a trip to Siletz Bay and back over the coast road. This is the first auto to make this trip and of course they had some exciting adventures. Finding it necessary on one occasion to spend the night in a wayside barn the pathfinders did not take the precaution to notify anybody of their intention. The owner on finding them, was going to have them all arrested, thinking they were a party of hobos, and only after much difficulty was he persuaded to let them come back to glory instead of the calaboose.

A sea lion was washed upon the beach during the week and is a great curiosity to many who go to look at the strange sea monster.

Sunday an unusual race occurred when Percy Young, with his wife, and Rocky Mason and Miss Flora Mason in his auto, left Albany a half hour after the train and reached here a half hour before the excursion.

Judge Bean with his wife and son came down from Portland in their auto and are spending a few days in their cottage.

W. L. Langdon, of Portland, with his wife and daughter, Miss Grace Langdon, are occupying their Summer home.

C. D. Stephens with his wife and baby motored down from North Yakima and are cosily fixed for the Summer in The Den.

Dr. Milgard, of Spokane, is passing a few weeks at the beach.

Professor Horner, of Corvallis, with his wife and daughters, Miss Vera and Pearl, have taken a cottage for the Summer.

Don E. Milgrim, of Oregon City, has brought his wife and children to the coast for a few weeks.

R. W. McClary and wife, of Portland, are among this week's visitors.

F. A. Knapp, of Portland, has brought his grandchildren with their nurse down to Agate Beach for the Summer.

Felix La Branch motored down from Salem and is occupying his cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowers, of Portland, are camping here for a few weeks. They were formerly from New York.

Rev. Mr. Schwimley, of Ashland, with his family, are tenting while they enjoy the seashore.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Blain, of Albany, arrived this week at the beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Havens and children, of Portland, are spending a few weeks at the beach.

Rev. Mr. Fry, of the Sunnyside Methodist Church, has arrived at the beach to pass the Summer.

The Casteel cottage has been taken for the Summer by R. J. Sihler.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Huland, of Eugene, will pass the next few weeks in their cottage.

Miss Sara Griffith, Miss Hazel Cootes, Miss Evaline Ijams and Miss Jessie M. Johnson are guests at the Damond.

Mr. Magallon, of Walla Walla, has brought his family to the seashore to pass the Summer.

Mrs. Rocky Mason was the hostess of a delightful dinner party given at the Agate Beach Inn last Sunday evening. The place cards caused a great deal of amusement, as each guest was represented by some characteristic cleverly overdrawn. Those present were Mr. Rocky Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Young, Miss Flora E. Mason, H. Morton, H. W. Hawkins, Eva L. Simpson, Mrs. E. D. Cusick, George Cusick and Grace Langdon.

Dr. W. F. Rictor and family are established at Tent City for the Summer.

Miss Jessie Swanson and sister are late arrivals at Newport.

C. D. Sailing and family, of Portland, are comfortably established in a tent for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hoefs and three daughters are guests at the beach.

Guests who registered at the Abbey for the week ending July 24, were: Mrs. R. B. Tooze, Dallas; E. F. Bowers, Miss Frankie Bowers, Beaver Creek; C. M. Keep, Beaver Lake; Gus Laken, Astoria; George R. Hyslop, Corvallis; F. L. Kent, Corvallis; Mr. Zimmerman and wife, Portland; Mrs. Jean Cline and daughter, Portland; Mrs. James R. Baker, Portland; C. J. Harrison and wife and Mrs. H. LIVELY TIME AT LAKE LYTLE

Warm Weather Brings Crowds From Cities Afar.

LAKE LYTLE, Or., July 27.—(Special.)—With the close of the Elks' convention and the coming of warm weather to the city visitors have begun to flock into the resort. The tent city is now well filled and numerous campers pass through to stay for a night near where the trout bite. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brawley and their daughters are the latest arrivals here and will occupy apartments in the tent city for several weeks.

A party composed of C. P. Miles and wife, Mrs. Kertaner and George McCurry, of Portland, arrived the last of the week for a stay of ten days.

Mrs. A. J. Ray, of Portland, with her two daughters, arrived Monday for a two weeks' stay at the resort. The lake boating is especially attractive to them and provides constant entertainment.

Attractions of the tent city are proving strong with E. E. Lytle, who arrived with his wife and daughters last week for an outing of a few weeks. The party also includes Mrs. J. Ellis and Miss Louie Allekaff, of Portland.

TILLAMOOK BEACH IS POPULAR

New Hotel Has Been Completed and Patronage Starts Out Well.

TILLAMOOK BEACH, July 27.—(Special.)—Notwithstanding the adverse weather, there is much activity at Tillamook Beach. The new hotel has been completed, and judging from the past week its capacity will be fully taxed for the rest of the season. Lake fishing and surf bathing are favorite pastimes.

Among the hotel guests for the past week were Mr. and Mrs. George M. Allen and son, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Fowler and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Thorne, Hilda Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McCord, Stirling McCord, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Fields, daughters and grandson, John W. Green, Percy Caufield of Oregon City, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Foley, Dr. Edna B. Northey, Mrs. Richard C. Morris, C. W. Ross and family, Willard R. Jones and family, Mr. and Mrs. Keppler and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Pletcher and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bennett and family and V. Kaspar.

Bible Is Quinaby Park Study.

QUINABY PARK, Or., July 27.—(Special.)—One of the notable addresses of the week was delivered Thursday at the tabernacle by Dr. C. C. Poling, on the subject, "The Book We Study," the speaker viewing the Bible from various standpoints—literary, historical, philosophical. Today the morning sermon was delivered by Rev. Guy Stover, and at 3 o'clock Dr. J. J. Bowersox spoke of his 50 years' work in the ministry. The evening service was in charge of Rev. V. Urbine. Arrivals yesterday were Rev. Chester P. Gates, Dallas; Mrs. S. M. Wood, Corvallis; C. A. Staver, Portland; R. L. Harris, Dayton, and Miss Bertha Magness, Wheatland.
