Attorneys Accuse Harold E. Butler of Fleecing Aged Woman.

BOGUS DEAL IS ALLEGED

Mrs. Camelle Says Second-Hand Man Has Her Money for Interest in Store Worth Nothing. Warrant Is Issued.

By preying upon the confidence of a widow, 60 years old, Harold E. Butler is alleged to have fleeced Mrs. M. E. Camelle out of practically the last cent she had in the world, and all her valuable personal property as well. During the three months that it is charged he was engaged in getting the money and property, representing $950, he was exceedingly exacting in his solicitude for the old lady's welfare, but as soon as he discovered that her resources were exhausted, he cast her

This is the allegation of her lawyers, Beckman & Rondeau, who were instrumental in securing a felony information against Butler yesterday, It is also the tearful story told by Mrs. Camelle, who appeared at the Municipai Court and secured a warrant for pai Court and secured a warrant for Butler's arrest.

Some time ago Mrs. Camelle was widowed by the death of her husband in a Canadian city. At 60 years she started out to earn her own livelihood, something that she had not before learned to de. Coming to Portland, she managed, with a tidy fund in her possession, to lease a small lodging house, at 170 Eleventh Street. This she fitted up tastily, and called "The Raymond." Small Profits Were Enjoyed.

She was making a little money, but not much. Shortly after establishing herself she had some dealings with C. H. Libby, an attorney. As a result, Libby was indicted early in the year by the grand jury, on a charge of mulcting Mrs. Camelle of $250.

But a faith in humanity, born of 60 years of living in a Canadian city, where the people were not covetous, was not shaken by that one experience.

About the first of May she was notically the authority of May she was notically the continuous she was not she sed that the apartments she had leased were to be torn down. While looking for a new location, she met Harold E. Deal Negotiated Between Them.

SYMPATHY IS EXPRESSED

Halfbreed Postmaster Not as Bad a Painted, 'Tis Declared.

Genuine sympathy of his neighbors, who believe in his honesty, and of the who believe in his honesty, and of the Federal authorities conversant with the circumstances resulting in his arrest, is manifested toward Astor A. Anderson, postmaster at Jewell, Clatsop County, who is in the Multnomah County jail, awaiting a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Cannon on the charge of embergling $1100 from the Government. Anderson is a halfbreed whose father was Norwesian. His mother is a full-was Norwegian. His mother is a full-blooded Indian. He is 47 years of age, and a cripple, having lost an arm. The missing funds are said to have been taken during the last 18 months, but the shortage is attributed entirely to careless handling of the money rather than a criminal intent on the part of Anderson. In addition to being unable property to handle money, it is underproperly to handle money, it is under-stood that the quarters occupied by Anderson as a postoffice were acces-sible to all patrons. It is intimated that the money was abstracted from the till by unscrupulous visitors to the office. When arrested, Anderson did not have any money in his possessica. Ed Jamieson has been placed in tem-porary charge of the postoffice at Jewell by Postoffice Inspector Durand, who caused the arrest of Anderson upon discovering the shortage.

Obtaining money under false pretenses is the accusation contained in another indictment. William H. Scholling is the defendant. It is charged that he collected $3 from Mrs. Minnie A. Schulz as entrance fees for her three children in a phrenological contest which failed to materialize. Scholling is said in the indictment to have represented to Mrs. Schulz that the first prize would be $300 and that there would be several others ranging down to $50. A copy of the receipt he is alleged to have given her is contained in the indictment. In this he gave his the indictment. In this he gave his office address as 508-14 Dekum building.

In fact, farmers claim the fertility of the Oregon soil is so great that the berries and vegetables they raise are growing larger every year, and the time may not be far distant when entirely new species of all farm produce, bearing the title "Oregon," will go over the world, just as Oregon apples and pears do at present.

Philomath, in Benton County, deserves mention for the radishes being raised by Mrs. William Fish. Mrs. Fish recently exhibited a radish that was 7½ inches round and 13 inches in length.

Rhubarb of Giant Size.

A. G. McQuire, who lives in Eugene, has found that the raising of colossal vegetables may be remunerative, as well as providing something to exhibit among the neighbors. Mr. McQuire raised a stalk of rhubarb two feet in length, and five inches in circumference. Indicative that huge produce does not affect the balance of a crop, is adduced from the fact that at his last cutting, Mr. McQuire obtained 500 pounds from 61 hills. From 128 hills he has already sold $50 worth of rhubarb. "Quite ordinary," says Mr. McQuire, but his neighbor's showing is not quite so good. Rhubarb of Giant Size
