Deputy District Attorney Collier Opens War on Extortioners of City.

ceedings after judgment without notifying the District Attorney.

Believing that the broad light of day Believing that the broad light of day is the only weapon needed with which to break up the extortionate practices of loan sharks, Deputy District Attorney Collier, who already has procured the indictment and will handle the prosecution of two of the trade, has thrown himself bodily into the fight, and will devote as much of his time as may be necessary to fighting their practices, depending entirely upon publicity and righteousness.

In a campaign outlined by the prosecutor, the expedient of bringing the business out into the open is featured as the thing most to be depended upon. While loan sharks work under cover of law and use the courts against the courts' will in furtherance of their business. business out into the open is featured as the thing most to be depended upon. While loan sharks work under cover of law and use the courts against the courts' will in furtherance of their business, the whole traffic is so hedged around with barriers against publicity that only a painstaking search can discover the fact that an apparently innocent action is in fact the unconscionable demand of an extortioner.

Legerdemain Is Used.

The note duly given for an amount far larger than the borrower received, he is from that time helpiess in the hands of the shark. An attachment is levied and summons served for appearance to defend it. If the victim appears, he faces his written acknowledgment of the receipt of a sum larger whole is not into the degment of the receipt of a sum larger where he was president of Albany college. levied and summons served for appear-ance to defend it. If the victim ap-pears, he faces his written acknowlpears, he faces his written acknowledgment of the receipt of a sum larger by 25 or 50 per cent than what he actually received, on which he probably has paid as much as the face in "interest." His protestations that he did not receive the money and that he has paid back a large part of it, are faced down by counter testimony and by the absence of anything in writing to sup-port his statement, for by clever legerdemain many of the sharks manage to seem to indorse payments, but do not do so, the entry going upon another piece of paper, "palmed" with the note. But usually the harassed victim puts in no appearance, and default judgment is entered against him. Then he fails into the hands of the blackmailing collecting agency, which, as often as the court will permit it, hales him in on supplemental proceedings, to give full account of his receipts and disburseaccount of his receipts and disbursements since the judgment. In the hands of a browbeating lawer, usually hired

If it develops that the defendant has permitted himself one little luxury in permitted himself one little luxury in papers upon arriving in the United States and did not learn that a final decree of the court was necessary unserved on

It is to combat this vicious system that Collier has set himself. At every stage in the proceedings where a loan shark seeks to enforce his extortionate claim, the District Attorney will step in and will act as defending attorney for the victim, if only he will present himself. It has been the experience since the fight began, that the shark dare not face a fight, and invariably will settle upon equitable grounds rather than allow a ventilation of his

The stand taken by the prosecutor has another purpose. It is not the intention to let the prosecution of the extertioners drop with the indictments now pending, but to hale into court every individual whose operations come under the construction of the nuisance act which the District Attorney is backing. To this end it is the desire of the prosecutor to get possession of the facts in every transaction of the kind, and this can only be done by gaining the confidence of the victims.

Unfavorable publicity is the favorite weapon of the loan shark, who more than any other weapon, relies upon the fear of his borrower that his plight will fear of his borrower that his plight will become known. The shark's weapon is now to be turned upon himself and if Collier's plans work out, no usurious claim can be collected in the courts of Multnomsh County without the claimant facing full publicity as to his method in weaving his net of debt about the defendant. The plan has been tried successfully in other cities, notably Cleveland and Indianapolis.

COURT PROCEDURE

Overland Club Trial Likely to Revolutionize Routine of Tazwell's Docket.

ORDINANCES BASIS

Obscure Provision of Charter Give Municipality Right to Appeal Where Defendant Has Been Acquitted for Local Fractures.

Revolutionary changes in the practice in Municipal Courts is likely to arise through a chance ruling of Judge Tazwell, in the trial of the Overland Club cases last week, to the effect that proceedings for violations of city ordinances are not crimes.

The discovery is not a new one, the Supreme Court having so held numer-

The discovery is not a new one, the Supreme Court having so held numer-ous times, but the decision has not been pressed to its obvious conclusions, as now promises to be the case.

As all statutes regulating court pro-cedure are made to apply to crimes, either misdemeanors or felonies, the rules of procedure are held not to ap-ply to cases based on city ordinances, except as explicitly laid down in the city charter. Therefore, it is argued, the court can regulate trials in many respects as may seem good to him at the time. Such action was taken when the court ruled that the Overland de-fendants must be present at their trials, in spite of a statute that defendants need not appear in person when charged with misdemeanors.

Lower Court Reversed. The most recent determination of the Supreme Court in the matter was in the case of Emma Crawford, in which it was ruled that violations of city ordi-nances were not crimes as defined by statutes. The decision in the lower court was reversed because the woman, after testifying that she had not been convicted of any prior crime, was im-peached by a showing that she had been convicted of violating city ordinances. Some lawyers who have discussed the question would carry the logic farther and insist that no one can be imprisoned for violating a city ordinance as he would then be restrained of his liberty otherwise than for a crime. Again, the state constitution provides that the Legislature cannot pass local criminal laws, and it is argued that this would also restrain it from delegating such a power, as it has done in granting the city of Portiand a char-ter under which the Council is em-powered to make penal laws.

Obscure Provision Sighted. Coincident with the raising of this question, an obscure provision of the city charter has been brought to light, in which the city, as prosecutor, may appeal to the Circuit Court from the Municipal Court in cases where the defendant has been acquitted of a viola-tion of an ordinance.

The power, so far as known, has never been exercised, and is contrary to the generally accepted construction of the constitutional restriction against putting a citizen twice in jeopardy, but if such violations are not crimes the guaranties of the bill of rights would not apply.

astic Approval.

PORTLAND, Aug. 10 .- (To the Edir.)-As one interested in good music I feel constrained to say a word with reference to the concerts furnished the city by the Park band, W. E. McElroy,

During the past 22 years I have had the pleasure of hearing all the Port-land bands of note and consider that the band got together this season by til recently. He has resided in Oregon Mr. McElroy is the finest local aggre-16 years and has voted and served on gation I have ever heard. In many regation I have ever heard. In many respects it is the equal of ome of the professional concert by dis that have visited Portland during the last several years. I have heard McElroy's band in eight concerts, so far and have gone away on each occasion more than pleased. W. E. McElroy is himself a "practical" bandman and has collected about him a company of players, all of whoff are experienced performers. A about him a company of players, all of whom are experienced performers. A feed section of 15 unusually strong, a tric of trombones, worthy a place in any concert band; a bass section in-cluding strings, cornet players care-fully and judiciously selected, a bari-tone who is equal to the best heard so far in Fortland, the whole constitut-ing a well-balanced organization of 32 pieces.

Mr. McElroy is fortunate in his so-loists. B. F. Driscoil, well known to Portland music lovers, is now at his best and his cornet solos are examples of the finest art. Brilliance and fin-ish characterize all he does. Louis Biancone, the clarionetist, is capable, musicianly and gracious. The passion-ate colorful temperamental solos of ate, colorful, temperamental solos of the young Italian baritone. Eugene Cloffi, are a treat to all who hear him. H. K Knight, flutist, has a career be hind him which has fitted him for the important place he so intelligently and thoroughly fills.

The work of the band grows increasingly effective with each concert.
In detail of expression including tone production, in the gradual, cumulative sweep of climax, in contrastive antith-ises, from planissimo to fortisimo, in ises, from planissimo to fortisimo, in inteiligent phrasing and response to direction, the Park Band of 1912 would be a credit to any city.

Mr. McElroy conducts with authority. He dominates at all times, is nervous, aggressive, flexible, with large interpretive ability and command. I consider him without a peer for the work in hand. His programmes are ample and varied, and his lighter selections receive the same conscientious treatment as do the masterpieces.
