upon Christy Mathewson's proposed system of de-Basing the calculations laid off from the catching job. In the days of Stricklett the pitchers wet the ball all over, but now the flingers have discovered that the same results can be accomplished by merely wetting a spot for the fingers to rest upon. Let the ball shoot off the fing-ers with the grip on the wet area, and it goes practically dead, with little or no spinning motion, until it gets al-most to the batter. Then it takes a freakish turn calculated to fool most any batter.

Two Spitball Musters. Russ Ford, of the New York Yanks, and Ed Walsh, of the Chicago Sox, are two pitchers who have mastered the spitball. They can control its breaks and cause the ball to shoot one of sev-eral ways by putting the thumb on the unbathed portion of the leather. This gives the sphere a small spinning mo-tion away from the direction that the curve should break. I thoesn't seem probable that he will be with the seals next year, although if the Coast League fathers a State League organization, he will have charge of the team financed by San Francisco and used as a farm for the seals.
