was the only auditor during the rain Wednesday, the worry became almost consternation.

For be it known that Miss Beatrice Bruckman, which was Mrs. Pelz name before her marriage, was ordered sent to Siberia because of a students' revolutionary "prank" from the St. Petersburg Academy.

Through "pull" the sentence was suspended, but until Mrs. Pelz left a few weeks ago for this country she was never out of sight of the "third section," the secret branch of the force. The continued espionage got on her nerves and it was only in Portland that she began to feel free at last.

So when she told Philip Pelz of her fears, that impressive Russian determined to tackle the stranger.

He did—and in Russian, too, But the stranger either would not or did not understand.

Then in German, and as Mrs. Pelz shrunk into a corner she noticed that the "third section," was still "onlying been discourteous in this instance."
