

SEASIDE PLANS MANY IMPROVEMENTS FOR NEXT SUMMER

Despite Many Drawbacks, Present Season Has Been Enjoyable—Social Activity Unabated—Salmon Trout Plentiful and Fly Fishermen in Their Element.

SEASIDE, Or., Aug. 31.—(Special.)—The citizens of Seaside expect to do extensive work in the way of improvements before next summer. This year has definitely shown the Seaside that Portlanders, especially, and also the Easterners, like the little old town and cling to it through all its misfortunes. After the election next fall, when it will be really legal to collect the taxes and spend them in improving the city, Mayor Gilbert says there will really be something doing. Bridge street will be widened, the streets will be laid out in a more business-like way, and it will be easier to locate a cottage or business house. Many buildings of cement are expected to take the place of some of the old shacks here now; in fact two of the already begun and one, nearly completed, is a big contrast to the nearby buildings. Some new summer homes are already contracted for and more building is looked forward to than ever before.

Dan Moore also is in on the new resolution and he intends to add a few touches to his hotel next year so as to make it a better pleasure resort for his patrons who visit here from one summer to the next. The City of Seaside has bought a new fire engine, which has been needed for some time. At the time the Moore theater burned the water supply was so inadequate that the stream would not even reach to the top of a telegraph pole which was ablaze endangering the wires. It was almost pathetic to stand there and see men trying their best to save property without even the most requisite at hand. The new engine has been placed at a cost of $3000 and is being placed on the banks of the Necanicum River. It will be able to throw streams of water within one minute after the alarm has sounded.

The Knights of Pythias have bought a fine corner lot and expect to put up a good building for their own use. The Catholic Church has been helped along so well this summer that they have in mind the site for a new edifice. Father Langard is always at work at Seaside and he is so pleasant and popular that people enjoy helping his cause.

Fishing is extra good this month right close to Seaside and the little Necanicum River supplies many a family with good meals daily. Salmon trout are beginning to be most plentiful, and fishing with a fly is the best right now. Maury Sawrey, a Seaside merchant, caught a five-pound salmon trout this week near the bridge at the Seaside House. He used a homemade fly made by Clarence Godfrey.

Miss Hilda Jacobs is visiting Miss Minna Fiechen this week. Frank McGuire and William Shepherd went over to Long Beach for a few days this week. Frank has visited Long Beach every summer for the past 25 years, and is a house guest in the Shepherd cottage on the south board walk at Seaside.

Mrs. Simon Wolfe and Mr. and Mrs. S. Solomon have taken the Merrill cottage on the south board walk and will pass the next month there.

Miss Leah Cohen left the beach this week and after a few days in Portland left for New York City accompanied by her brother, I. Labowitz. Miss Cohen is interested in vocal music and has gone East to remain at the opera house for several summers. She has accompanied her mother to Seaside, where they have the "Crows Nest" cottage.
