GOTHAM SPORTS MAY PLAY RACES, RULES COURT

Chicagoan in New York During War's Series Finds Man by Paging Scoreboard Crews—Deputy Sheriff Bear Puzzled by Single-Legged Men.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—(Special)—Horseracing, which has been under the ban in this state for a couple of years, is likely to be revived next Spring. Supreme Court Justice Townsend Scudder has rendered a decision which has put new life in the hopes of racing men. It is almost certain that the tracks will again be in operation under the laws put through at the behest of Governor Hughes it was practically impossible to keep the sport going. One section prohibited even verbal bets, while another held directors of the tracks liable if any kind of gambling was held on their premises. The result was that wealthy men who figured on the boards of the associations declined to run the chance of being sent to prison and ordered the tracks closed.

Justice Scudder's opinion is an exhaustive review of the law and cites many other cases similar to that of Paul Shane, the man who was arrested at Belmont Park last June. The charge against him was that Matty Corbett, a former bookmaker, made a verbal bet with Shane, the man made a memorandum and passed it to the latter.

Justice Scudder ruled that betting within the meaning of the law is bookmaking with paraphernalia, but that ordinary wagering on the outcome of a horserace is not a crime.

"The Legislature," he says, "has not made it a crime to bet on horse races, and the court is powerless to do so."
Concerning the directors' liability law, Justice Scudder holds that they must have knowledge of a specific act to make them liable under the statute, and concludes:
"The law will not permit the conviction of the owner of a racetrack who has no knowledge of the fact that bookmaking is going on in his premises."
Unless the Court of Appeals reverses the present decision it puts the racing situation back at the same point as in 1910 before the tracks were closed.

The recent visit of the fleet has been an excellent thing from a naval standpoint. Never in the history of the country has there been such a rush of applicants to enter in time of peace as there is now being handled by the officers of the local recruiting stations. The influx started even before the ships sailed out to sea and each day since it has been more pronounced.

An interesting feature is found in the large percentage of applicants who are succeeding in passing the mental and physical examinations. As a general rule the Navy men feel amply satisfied if 20 per cent of the applicants are acceptable, but of those now applying, between 34 and 40 per cent get by without any difficulty.

During the recent baseball series all of New York, that could, desisted business to hang about the various bulletin boards. While the excitement was at its height, a man from Chicago drifted into town to see a business man whose office is in Times Square. The New Yorker, wearing a hat and carrying only a few hours to spare. Being resourceful, he hired a messenger boy, and the lad forced his way through the crowds chanting, "Mr. Brown, of Chicago, wants to see Mr. Blank at his office." The explanation was successful, and the business man left the scoreboards in the middle of an exciting inning.

The Pulitzer School of Journalism, which is meeting with success at Columbia, now has a "single-legged" New York University. That institution offers two years' study in magazine writing, all the instructors being men actually engaged in the making and writing of current magazines. The department plans to turn out men and women who will be able to take places on the editing, advertising and circulation staff of a standard magazine, a trade journal or a religious publication. Courses are given in magazine writing, copy editing, news writing, current topics, special feature work and magazine writing, short stories, advanced magazine work, magazine verse, magazine advertising, and magazine circulation. After students have graduated with distinction, all that will be necessary for them to do will be to secure accounts with the magazine and make good.

The latest statistics show that $4,250,000,000 is on deposit among the various savings banks of the United States. In the state of New York, with its carefully drawn laws, is found fully 40 per cent of this amount.

The number of banks in the Union is approximately 2000, the number of depositors about 3,000,000, but 80 per cent of all the deposits is in the Eastern banks, the remaining 20 per cent being scattered over a vast territory.

In the eastern section of the United States almost every other person has a savings account in the Middle West and Far West the percentage is as low as one in 500.

Deputy Sheriff Bear, who does not drink, tells of a strange experience in an East Side saloon. Beer was sent out to arrest one Giuseppe Rao, who he was told, could be found in a certain saloon and could be easily identified because he had only one leg. Beer went to the place, saw a one-legged man and told him he was under arrest. The prisoner protested. The door opened, and another one-legged man came in and asked what the trouble was about. The bartender limped from behind the bar to investigate and he, too, had one leg. Then a fourth man went out to see what Beer began to think that perhaps there was something in his own name. He went out and secured a citizen who helped him pick up Rao. The saloon, it seems, was the headquarters of the Italian One-legged Fraternity of the city.
