"British Columbia is already taking steps to open the Columbia to the Canada line." he said, "and if the United States Government will cooperate, we eventually will have an open river to the sea. It is needless, however, to seek for an opening of the Columbia to its mouth from Portland however, to seek for an opening of the Columbia to its mouth from Portland, unless we are backed by an extensive development of the waterways inland. Portland will not be faithful to her trust unless he maintains the competitive line of steamers on the upper river. You have no business to go to the Government seeking appropriation for opening the lower river, unless the upper river maintains a developed ransportation. The upper river should

e kept open by Portland, even if it just be done, for a time, at a loss." Professor William Dennison Lyman, of Walla Walla, president of the Co-lumbia & Snake Rivers Waterways As-sociation, describing the work that has thus far gone forward in opening up the river, declared "no man has done more for the cause of transportation n the Northwest than Mr. Teal."

gree complex and difficult to frame. Another reason is that the facts themselves are of great interest, even apart from the laws. Take such an unimportant item as the ichthyophagi. Two thousand years ago the Greeks heard with wonder of tribes whose sole die was fish. Nearchus, who accompanied Alexander to India, tells of ichthyophagi along the Coast of Makran, in Southern Persia, and modern travelers confirm his accounts. They add that the country is so barren that, in years of drought, even the abstemious donkeys cannot find sufficient grass or weeds to support life, and would die, did not their masters feed them upon dried fish. Pliny locates the ichthyophagi on the islands of the Persian gulf: Pausanias mentions others on the west coast of Arabia, where Burton found them in modern times; and other travelers report them elsewhere. Ancient scientists and modern authors of books of travel are not the only persons interested in fish-eating tribes. In Central Asia I told my caravan men one day that I proposed to visit the Lopliks, who lived several hundred miles to the east of the shores of the shallow and almost dry lake of Lop. Nor. After a few hours, one of the men came back from the market place, whither he had been to make inquiries, and proceeded to ask questions. "Is it true that those Lopliks whom we are Men and Women Attend Banquet in Honor of Booster of 1 Port.

Medical Advice

I believe my remedy Manalin is adapted to your wants exactly. To be sure, there are several other remedies for constipation, especially prepared for children, advertised. I am sure, however, that Manalin is just as good as any other remedy on the market, just as palatable, just as effective, and a bottle of Manalin contains two or three times as much medicine as the usual bottle of iaxative for bables. In these days of high cost of living the price of a medicine is worth looking after.
