

The Morgan-Atchley Furniture Company Are Actually Retiring From Business

We wish to emphasize this statement for the purpose of showing a REASON for the enormous reductions we have made on ALL GOODS IN STOCK. The prices we are now making are in almost every instance less than we would have to pay to replenish our stock. Then why would we make these prices if we were going to continue in business? However, the public are not so much interested in whether or not we are going to continue in business as they are in knowing what they will have to pay for the goods.

FARM EXPERTS WORK

Agricultural Department of O. W. R. & N. Aids Prospects.

C. L. SMITH HEADS BUREAU

D. E. Clark, "Raised in the Saddle," is Principal Livestock Man. L. S. Smith and Floyd W. Rader Complete Staff.

With four men constantly at work in various parts of the Northwest, the O. W. R. & N. is aiding materially in the agricultural development of the territory served by its lines. Although R. B. Miller, traffic manager for the company, long has been a persistent advocate of more men on the farms, it was not until about a year ago that a systematic attempt was made to induce city people to go on the land and to help those already on it to success.

Then it was an agricultural department was started, with C. L. Smith, a practical farmer of many years' experience, at its head. A short while later D. E. Clark, a livestock expert, was placed in charge of the animal husbandry division of this department. The innovation proved such a success that Mr. Smith's son, L. S. Smith, was made his assistant. A few months ago, with the co-operation of the Federal Department of Agriculture, Floyd W. Rader, a young man of much technical and practical experience, was placed in charge of plant industries on the lines of the company in Oregon. These four men now are working in harmony to the end that all kinds of agriculture, horticulture and stock raising in Oregon, Washington and Idaho will be developed along substantial and profitable lines, thus adding to the comfort and happiness of the people of the entire Northwest, and to the revenues of the railroad that has undertaken this movement.

patting in the campaigns in Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia and fighting in such battles as Stone River, Tallahoma, Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge and in Sherman's Atlanta campaign.

At the close of the war he settled in Minnesota, engaging in farming and gardening. Owing to ill health, a result of the war, he could not do manual labor for a while, and this period of inactivity gave him a chance to study agriculture and horticulture on a scientific basis. He was instrumental in organizing the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, the State Agricultural Society and the Grange. He gave the first lecture in the first Farmers' Institute ever held in the State of Minnesota. His address was an argument in favor of diversified farming, which doctrine he has continued to preach ever since.

Farmer's View Is Seen. He has an interesting and original way of expressing himself—a way that appeals to the farmers and he has never been without offers to appear on the lecture platform before bodies of farmers and scientists interested in agricultural development. He attributes his success to the fact that his point of view always has been from the farmer's side and that he has a habit of saying things in such a way as to arrest the attention and arouse the interest of the farmers. He always has maintained and operated his own farm, where he could conduct personal experiments on subjects that came under his observation on his lecture tours. In spite of the fact that he has devoted most of his time on his own farm to experimental work he never has failed to make it pay.

Mr. Smith came to Oregon in 1899 to give some lectures on dairying. He liked the country so well that he decided to stay. He bought a farm in Spokane County, Washington, where his family now resides. Although his wife died when the children were small, he has kept the family together, his five children and 15 grandchildren living with him on the farm.

Hogs Given Attention. D. E. Clark is a native of Cheyenne, Wyo., a typical livestock city. He was "raised in the saddle" and learned from nature even before he started to learn from books. He early expressed a fondness for cattle and other stock and naturally learned all he could about them. He attended the common schools and the Wyoming State University, graduating as a veterinarian. He served two years as state veterinary surgeon for Wyoming and later conducted a veterinary hospital at Cheyenne. He also engaged in stock raising on his own place near Cheyenne, operating with success.

Since coming to Oregon he has been out in the field most of the time, giving the farmers and stockmen valuable assistance in their work and helping them in marketing their cattle, hogs and sheep. Because the Northwest has neglected the hograising industry for so many years he is giving particular attention to this line of work.

Education Is Practical. L. S. Smith is 34 years old, a native of Minnesota, a graduate of the Minneapolis city schools and of the Minnesota State Agricultural School where he specialized in dairy work. On leaving school he took the position of butter maker in the Le Sour creamery and later operated a creamery at Lexington, Minn. In 1899 he took up a homestead in Northern Minnesota and two years later operated the Milton Co-operative Creamery at Milton, Minn., coming to Spokane three years later, since which time he has devoted most of his time to horticultural work.

O. W. R. & N. COMPANY'S STAFF OF PRACTICAL MEN WHO ARE ASSISTING FARMERS AND STOCKGROWERS OF NORTHWEST.

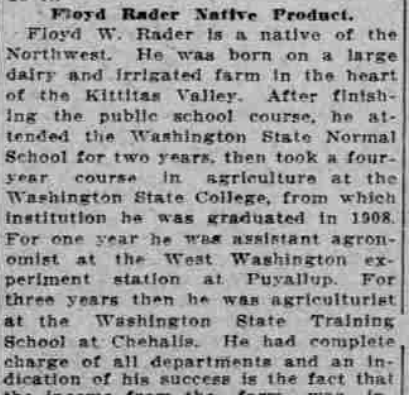

C. L. Smith

He has been active in grange work, being a lecturer for two years for the Spokane County Pomona Grange. He is a ready talker and a student of industrial and economic conditions, is familiar with the best-known methods of scientific and practical farm work, and, as a matter of fact, has done the real work on the farm, in the orchard, in the dairy and in the creamery, and can show the novice how to milk a cow, feed a calf, make butter, harness a horse, hold a plow or run any kind of farm machinery. He not only can tell how to do it, but can go in and do it.

Floyd Rader Native Product. Floyd W. Rader is a native of the Northwest. He was born on a large dairy and irrigated farm in the heart of the Kittitas Valley. After finishing the public school course, he attended the Washington State Normal School for two years, then took a four-year course in agriculture at the Washington State College, from which institution he was graduated in 1908. For one year he was assistant agronomist at the West Washington experimental station at Puyallup. For three years then he was agriculturalist at the Washington State Training School at Chehalis. He had complete charge of all departments and an indication of his success is the fact that the income from the farm was increased under his direction from $3000 a year to $12,000 a year. In his present position he is employed by both Government and the O. W. R. & N. Co.

As Mr. Miller believes in putting practical men in charge of this work he has employed none other. As the department continues to grow he will maintain that policy.

Floyd W. Rader

County Commissioner Assaulted. CHEHALIS, Wash., Dec. 14.—(Special.)—T. J. Long, County Commissioner-elect, had occasion to go into court yesterday with his butter maker, R. E. Miller, whom he had discharged in the morning. When Miller was told that there was a new man there to take his place, he struck his employer and made further threats. According to the testimony of Mr. Long at the hearing before Justice of the Peace Westover, Mr. Long swore out a warrant and Miller, who pleaded guilty, was fined $10 and costs.

Mrs. Anna Guenter Sought. SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 14.—Mrs. Anna Guenter, who with her two young daughters and a son left Calgary, Alberta, December 10 for this city, have been reported to the police here as mysteriously missing by the Rev. P. H. Liss, a local clergyman.

BIG ESTATE IS CLAIMED

SEATTLE WOMAN IS SISTER OF NEW YORK RECLUSE.

Aged Spinster Found Dead in Poor Quarters in Gotham Leaves Property Worth Million.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 14.—Mrs. Amelia Frederick Chittenden, a resident of this city, has come forward as a claimant for the half interest in the $1,000,000 estate of Miss Octavia Frederick, an eccentric recluse, who was found dead recently in New York, the only other occupants of the rooms being a dog and half-starved cats, pets of the dead woman.

The aged woman, who had cheap lodgings above a barber shop, apparently had been attacked by the overturning of a stove on which she was cooking her Thanksgiving turkey. After her death the barber, Antony Orskanto, came forward with a will, bequeathing Miss Frederick's estate, consisting of valuable New York real estate, to him, but Mrs. Chittenden asserts that Miss Frederick, who was her sister, had no right to dispose of the property.

Mrs. Chittenden claims the estate for herself and her brother, Alfonso Frederick, of Los Angeles, on the ground that the property was left by their parents with the elder sister in trust for the three children. Mrs. Chittenden left today for New York to confer with attorneys there.

The latest information received here concerning the case was that the barber had been held by the District Attorney in New York pending an investigation of the death of Miss Frederick. Mrs. Chittenden is 72 years old and her sister was 74.

Miss Octavia Frederick was an eccentric for many years. From the property left by her parents, which at one time had been a great fortune, but which had diminished through unfortunate investments, she derived an income of several hundred dollars a month and for 25 years she with good judgment, and the property, which at the time of her parents' death had greatly diminished, had grown again to a value estimated at more than a million.

Town Would Save Water Supply. COTTAGE GROVE, Or., Dec. 14.—

water, recognized as the equal of any in the West, to be one of the city's biggest assets, is evidenced by a resolution forwarded today to members of Congress asking that body permanently set aside the township of timber forming the watershed from which the water is secured. There are several million feet of merchantable fir timber on the land and the resolution was passed for the purpose of preventing the timber from being logged, resulting in contamination of the water.
