FISHER'S PLACE IS VEXING PROBLEM

East Exerts Pressure Upon Wilson Against Selection of Western Man.

PINCHOT IDEA REVIVED

President-elect Open to Conviction, and Duty of People of Public Mind of Fallacy.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Jan. 25.—The selection of a Secretary of the Interior is causing President-elect Wilson more concern than any other problem with which he is at present confronted. This is the report brought back to Washington by various Senators and others who have conferred with Mr. Wilson about Cabinet appointments and public policy, and on this one point all seem agreed. Moreover, it is generally conceded that Mr. Wilson is still a long way from determining who shall succeed Mr. Fisher in the Cabinet. Some Cabinet officers, it is believed, have been definitely settled upon, but this one in particular is still much in doubt.

Mr. Wilson finds himself between two fires. The West is pulling every available string to induce the incoming President to select a Western man for Secretary of the Interior; the East and the conservationists are protesting against the appointment of any Westerner, no matter what his standing or what his views, and at the same time are clamoring for the appointment of an Eastern or Southern man who is an out and out conservationist, in the sense in which that term is generally interpreted. To this latter proposition the West is objecting.

Criticism Sure to Follow.
It is evident that President Wilson is going to be criticised, no matter who he may select for Secretary of the Interior. If he picks a Western man, the East and the conservationists will not only protest, but will begin immediately an attack upon the new Secretary; if an Eastern man is named, the West will protest. There seems to be no way of satisfying all concerned; hence the perturbation that exists in the mind of the President-elect.

It is learned from what should be an authentic source that Governor Wilson has been much impressed by the argument presented to him by some of his strict conservation friends that an Eastern man should be placed at the head of the Interior Department. Repeatedly he has been informed that the public land and natural resource problems that come before the Interior Department are of direct concern to the entire country, and that only an Eastern man, without direct interest in those problems, can pass upon them with an unbiased mind. The argument presented by the conservationists is to the effect that any Western man, no matter what his general belief, would incline to the Western viewpoint, and in so doing would naturally be contrary to the wishes of those Eastern theorists who believe in the doctrine of Gifford Pinchot.

Eastern Man Not Improbable.
While it may seem inconsistent to declare that Governor Wilson, in view of his conservation ideas expressed in a recent Chicago speech, should seem inclined to the Pinchot view, yet that is the strong belief of men who are close to the President-elect, and who have talked with him at length regarding the appointment of a Secretary of the Interior. To many of these men, as he did to Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, Governor Wilson is competent to handle the public land problems practically. The work of the Interior Department deals almost entirely with the West, and none but Western men are personally familiar with Western conditions and Western problems. It is safe to predict that Governor Wilson will not select a butcher, but a banker, for Secretary of the Interior; his Secretary of War will be a man having knowledge of Army matters; his Secretary of Agriculture will be a man who has been or still is a farmer, or else a man who has specialized on farm work; he will not be a doctor. So it will go through the Cabinet, where special qualifications are required, and where special training is necessary. Yet it would be no more absurd to pick a butcher for Secretary of the Treasury than to select an Eastern theoretical conservationist for Secretary of the Interior.

Conservationists Are Busy.
The West has this to remember: The conservationists are not idle; they are more active than the Western men in their appeals to Governor Wilson. They are concentrating, and they are even now making out as good a case as possible against every Western man who is believed by them to be favorably regarded by Governor Wilson, notwithstanding his predisposition to decide against the West. Governor Norris, of Montana, has been bitterly and unfairly assailed publicly, and attacks upon other candidates have been submitted in writing to the President-elect.

As the issue is now shaping up, Governor Wilson is facing a challenge from the conservationists, who are assuming to dictate to him in the matter of this one Cabinet office. He has been, in effect, notified that if he selects a Western man for Secretary of the Interior, that man and the Wilson Administration will be assailed exactly as was the Taft Administration for the appointment of R. A. Ballinger as Secretary of Interior. The threat has been made that Wilson must not only name an Eastern man, but a Pinchot conservationist, or invite the attacks of the men who made life miserable for President Taft because of the Ballinger appointment.

This means that President-elect Wilson must bow to the dictates of these men of wealth and influence; these men with means of publicity at their command and a corps of experienced muck-rakers in their employ or under their control, or else take the consequences; in other words, he must allow them to select his Secretary of the Interior, or else go through a fight in all respects similar to that which marked the first two years of the Taft Administration.

LATE WELL-KNOWN LUMBERMAN W. H. DYE OF SAN FRANCISCO.

Ralph B. Dyer.
ASTORIA, Or., Jan. 25.—(Special.)—Ralph B. Dyer, vice-president and general manager of the Clatsop Mill Company, who died here this week following a stroke of apoplexy, was one of the most widely known and highly respected lumber men on the Pacific Coast. He was president of the Northwestern Box Manufacturers' Association, which maintains its headquarters in Portland, as well as actively identified with various other lumbermen's organizations. Mr. Dyer was born at San Francisco, Cal., on January 14, 1861. He came to the Columbia River district when a young man and for a number of years was associated with M. P. Callender and George George Flavel, of this city. Later, he went to South Bend, Wash., with the Simpson Lumber Company, remaining there until many years ago, when he returned to Astoria and assumed the management of the Clatsop Mill Company's plant. Besides his widow, Mr. Dyer left three children, Joseph, Wiona and Curtis, aged 14, 11 and 8 years, respectively, as well as a brother, residing in Alaska; one sister at Orem, Utah, and one sister in Honolulu, Hawaii.

17, at 3 P. M., on "The Irish Revival." Mr. MacManus, who was and is part of it, here discourses upon the great revolution, literary, linguistic, industrial, educational, social and national, that in recent years has been taking place in Ireland.

ALBANY MAY GET FACTORY

Clothing Likely to Be Manufactured if $15,000 Is Raised.

ALBANY, Or., Jan. 25.—(Special.)—Prospects are favorable for the establishment of a factory in Albany for the manufacture of overalls, shirts, mackinaws and corduroy. After fully investigating the proposition of J. H. Treglusk to establish such a factory here, the Albany Commercial Club has endorsed his proposal and has named a committee to assist in perfecting the organization of a company to establish the plant. This committee consists of J. A. Howard, E. D. Cusick, R. K. Ohlman, M. Senders, Hugh G. Fisher, Owen Beam, D. W. Merrill and George Taylor.

Mr. Treglusk, who came to Albany a few months ago from St. Paul, proposes to establish a $25,000 factory here, and offers to subscribe $10,000 worth of stock for the enterprise if an additional $15,000 is subscribed here.

ALBANY, Or., Jan. 25.—(Special.)—The funeral of the late William R.
