KNOCKER-PROOF!

Why is it, do you s'pose, that the leading auton turers in respective countries of Europe-the Daimler Company in England, the Mercedes Company in Germany, the Panhard Company in France and the Minerva Company in Belgium—have for years placed Knight motors in their cars? Why is it, do you s'pose, that they still stand faithful to it?

Why have many other European leaders-the Mors, Gregoire Aries, Rossel, Clement-Bayard, Germain, the N. A. G., the Kraft-fahrzeug Aktien-Gesselschaft, Johann Puch, the Martini and the Sigma Companies—petitioned, in recent years, license to sell the famous Silent Knight sleeve-valve motor? No one can dispute the fact that Europeans have always determined what the ultimate automobile types and designs are to be.

In fact, Europe has accepted only two or three American inventions that bear upon automobile construction. One of these inventions that has been fully approved and adopted by the leading European automobile builders is the Knight Type Motor, originated by Charles Y. Knight, a former Chicagoan. Now, there might be pertinent reasons for all these developments.

The F. B. Stearns Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, makers of the Stearns-Knight automobile, veterans of 17 years' successful experience, were the first Americans to be granted rights to the Knight patent. They stand sponsor for the Knight motor in America. The words Stearns and Knight are interchangeable.

Read what the American representative of the Panhard Company, France's famous automobile builders, who are using both the Knight and the very highest grade type of poppet valve motor, reports as to the status of the Knight motor: "We have used the Knight Type Motor for three years with very great success. have never entirely discontinued the poppet valve motor, but any rumors that we have again taken to the poppet valve type and dropped the Knight type are entirely unfounded, in view of the fact that we are selling about ten of the Knight type to one of the poppet valve type, and the ratio is increasing in favor of the sleeve valve motor.

Read this once more, especially the last line; remember that it comes from an acknowledged leader who makes both types of engines; then put on your thinking cap.

Find out for yourself. Are you going to buy a new motor ear without first thoroughly investigating the Stearns-Knight? Use the same cold judgment in this that you display in your other business affairs. Don't be swayed by the opinion of the man trying to sell you a poppet valve car. Bring any and all doubt and skepticism to us, and if we cannot brush it aside with logical refutation, we will stand corrected. Can you "stump" us?
