Portland scored the one run in the sixth inning on a walk to Kores, O'Rourke's excusable error and Lind-say's hit to center. They threatened again in the seventh, when Derrick singled and Krause doubled past third, but Chadbourne and Krueger could not neet for the pinch wallops.

Krueger is most unfortunate. Art is enjoying all the thrills and emotions of a batting slump, but somehow, no matter where McCredle stows him away in the batting roster, the Dutchman comes up in the pinch and then falls lown. Yesterday the crowd pelted the former idel with all sorts of merry persiflage, and little wonder his record today reads 4-0-0-1-0-0.

Attempt to Steal Home Falls. The Senators filled the bases twice in the eighth inning, but Krause tight-ened and the only run came in on Kenworthy's sacrifice. Moran tried to steal but was smothered. An error by Derrick presented the fourth mente tally in the final frame.

Track Meet Is Won.

The hardest-fought event was the pole-vault, and a low mark resulted as the athletes were tired out in the longrawn-out event. The grandstand was packed to capcity and it was with difficulty the field was kept clear.
