

CORVALLIS DRAWS FROM WIDE FIELD

Washington Leads in Outside Enrollment at Oregon Agricultural College.

63 COME FROM CALIFORNIA

Seattle Has Largest Individual Registration With 12, and Idaho Sends 21 Students From 13 Different Towns.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, June 14.—(Special).—Some interesting facts relative to the number of students who have come from the neighboring states of Washington, California and Idaho to Corvallis to pursue their educational ideals at Oregon's great vocational school are uncovered by a perusal of the past year's enrollment cards at Oregon Agricultural College.

Washington leads her sister states by sending 64, while the list of those registering from California falls short of this number by but a single name. Idaho stands third numerically with 21 students.

Although the 11 young women and 47 young men composing the Washington delegation hail from 33 towns in all quarters of the state, yet the western section furnishes the largest quota. Seattle is the home of 12 of the Northerners; three come from Bellingham; and an equal number from Crawford and Vancouver. Aberdeen appears opposite two names, as do also the following towns: Carrolton, Castle Rock, Collins, Conerville, McGowan, Rand, Spokane and White Salmon.

Seattle List Long. From Seattle come Della Purves, senior student in domestic art and student in the Margaret Hall Club, Home Economics Club and has served on the editorial staffs of the Oregon Countryman and the Oregon Agricultural College. She has been prominent in athletic; Joy W. Scudder, of glee club fame, a junior student in agronomy, and Henry Savare, a third-year major in the same course; Harold D. Foster is a junior in horticulture and Miss Jennie Cadwell is a domestic art junior. The underclassmen from Seattle are Ralph J. Bowers, sophomore in agriculture; G. R. Hoerner, freshman in agriculture, who has been prominent in debate and oratory; L. J. Goodrick, special in agriculture, and the following first-year men: Paul Albert, Richard W. Enders, from Carrolton and Alton Hurley, all students in the school of agriculture.

The Bellingham students are Frank D. Fielder, a junior in civil engineering; Milo Johns, junior in agriculture, and Ralph Squires, freshman in the same course.

From Crawford are Edward C. Allworth, junior in commerce, and Helen and Edith Allworth, first year students in domestic art and domestic science, respectively.

Vancouver Sends Three.

Registered from Vancouver are Olof Andreen, in agriculture; Edah M. Dye, in domestic science and art; and Geo. E. Monette, majoring in entomology.

Miss Annabelle Callison, junior in domestic science, and Ira L. Blackwell are from Aberdeen. From Carrolton are Robert E. Heavan in the school of commerce and Elbert L. Toune, taking agriculture.

From McGowan comes Lenore McGowan, first year domestic science and art, and Hazel Wiken, of the same department. From Randie are William R. Sells, sophomore in agriculture, and Clarence McMahon, freshman in agriculture. The Spokane students are Matilda Humason, freshman in home economics, and Ray E. Miller, sophomore in agriculture. Those from White Salmon are Richard E. Boddingshouse, freshman in mechanical engineering, and Frederick E. Phil, freshman in electrical engineering.

Singles Come From Many Towns.

Other Washington students at Oregon Agricultural College, their classification and home towns, are as follows: Lee B. Baldwin, first year pharmacy; Winlock; Otto Ballhorn, second year commerce; Woodland; Levi S. Rozarth, secondary agriculture; Amboy; Ada E. Cassella, optional, Bend; Carrie E. Clark, Waukegan, domestic science; Olga Donaldson, domestic science; Chinoak; Nick Haberman, first year commerce; Ellensburg; Sylvia Hardman, sophomore domestic science and art; Cape Horn; Dessa Holm, freshman domestic science and art; Wenatchee; C. Charles Tokaby, Toledo, freshman forestry; Neal E. Jamison, junior horticulture; Puyallup; Alfred Johnson, freshman agriculture; Eun-claw; Owen Johnson, freshman electrical engineering; Quincy; Gilbert Kellogg, junior agriculture; Hoquiam; R. E. Kreps, secondary agriculture; Laurel; Esther McKinney, sophomore domestic art; Centralia; Leroy Overholzer, freshman mechanical engineering; Pomeroy; D. J. Perard, senior pharmacy; Toppenish; James N. Shaw, White Bluff, sophomore agriculture; Ruth J. Shepard, third year, Roosevelt; Joseph A. Slavin, freshman agriculture, North Yakima; Glen Smith, sophomore mechanical engineering, Washougal; Martin Spalding, Goldendale, freshman agriculture; Tracy W. Wade, Carson City, sophomore electrical engineering; Parker Wrightman, special horticulture, Orchard.

California's Well Distributed.

The other Californians come from Anaheim, Ashland, Azusa, Chula Vista, Edwood, Etna Mills, Fullerton, Glendale, Hanford, Lewiston, McCloud, Mendocino, Oakbar, Orange, Orland, Pacific Grove, Paradise, Petaluma, Reedley, Riverside, Stockton and Twilock. Those enrolled from Pasadena are Albert B. Cole and Hugo Reimann, special in agriculture; Marshall C. Hayes, junior forestry, and the following students taking degree courses in agriculture: Oliver B. Hayes, sophomore; H. G. Loughrey, junior; William M. Macpherson, sophomore; Paul W. Rothenberg, freshman; Herbert W. Siefert, junior; George W. Stambach, sophomore; Earl H. Thompson, freshman. A. F. Mason and F. E. Neer are juniors in horticulture from Pasadena.

Smith River Has Four.

Representatives from Smith River are Harry C. Brown, secondary in commerce; Delosa Lewis, freshman in home economics; Herbert and Milton Woodruff, freshman students of electrical engineering and mechanical arts, respectively.

But few hop lice have appeared as yet in the hop yards in this section of the Chehalis district, but growers are prepared to combat them effectively, as prospects for fair prices for hops are again favorable. The Pinos 100-acre yard, just west of Chehalis, has added to its equipment two more sprayers. Hop vines show an exceptionally good growth.

EXTENSION WORK TO BEGIN

Members of Oregon Agricultural College Faculty to Lecture.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, June 14.—(Special).—Extension work, to which members of the O. A. C. faculty have been assigned for this week, will begin Tuesday at Wolf creek with lectures by Professor F. L. Kent, on dairying, and G. R. Hyslop, on farm crops, and will be repeated at Rogue River on Wednesday.

Thursday and Friday at Murphy and Talent, Miss Hilda Miller will join the lecturers as a representative of the department of domestic science.

At the Dalles Chautauqua Mrs. Alice Marks Dolman, instructor in domestic science, and Professor H. S. Jackson, department of plant pathology; V. I. Gardner, department of horticulture; A. L. Peck, department of landscape gardening; and R. D. Hetzel, director of extension, will assist.

Other meetings to be addressed next week are picnics at North Howells on Wednesday, and at Ainea and Belfountain on Friday.

PIONEER WOMEN OF HOOD RIVER DISCUSS EARLY DAYS.

Sitting—Mrs. C. H. Stranahan, Mrs. N. A. Moore, Mrs. John Parker, Mrs. O. L. Stranahan, Mrs. J. W. Hinrichs, Mrs. Emma Ingles, and Mrs. Newton Clark.

HOOD RIVER, Or., June 14.—(Special).—All of them past the half-century mark, 15 pioneer women of the Hood River Valley assembled on Friday of last week at the home of Mrs. Bert Stranahan, where they were entertained in the honor of Mrs. O. L. Stranahan, the hostess' mother-in-law. The early days of Hood River were recalled, for in this group were wives and mothers of the men who planted the first orchards and who engaged in the first business ventures in the town of Hood River and the surrounding valley. The earliest arrival of those present was Mrs. J. W. Hinrichs, who accompanied her husband here when but a half dozen families resided in the forest-covered valley.
