PYENG YANG HOSPITAL OFFICIAL'S FURLOUGH AT AN END.

DR. J. HUNTER WELLS AND HIS FAMILY.

Dr. J. Hunter Wells, of the C. H. Ladd hospital at Pyeng Yang, Corea, is leaving the city today for the scene of his work after an extended furlough. Dr. and Mrs. Wells are supported in their work in the foreign field by the First Presbyterian Church of this city, and have charge of the Caroline H. Ladd hospital, which served over 25,000 patients last year.

The departing physician said yesterday that Portland's reception to the Christian Citizenship Conference compares and surpasses in its hospitality any conference he has ever attended, not excluding such great ones as the Centennial Mission Conference in China, a few years ago, and the Congress of the Royal Public Health Board of England, held in Berlin, to which he was the American representative. He thinks, however, that the Christian Citizenship Conference is too big a thing for the Reform Association to handle, and that in future it should be under other auspices.

Returning to Corea, a province of Japan, Dr. Wells is glad to be a citizen of a city of which the public and the press take such a broad and correct view of the Japanese question. He hopes for an increase in local trade direct to Japan and China from Portland and pledges his support for all agencies promoting better feeling and more business.

While his term of service is for eight years at the hospital, Dr. Wells hopes to return for a short visit before then, and says that if Portland advances as much in proportion in the future as it has in the past, half a million people will soon occupy it.
