SACRAMENTO Cal., July 26 .- (Spe-icial.)-Pentup resentment of Sacramento fandom and ball players at the detiticisions and demeanor of Umpires Bush and Guthrie broke forth this afternoon in the most bitter riotous anti-umpire demonstration that has been known to Sacramento baseball since the days of the Stockton State League team. The Portland Beavers won today's game, 8 10 Sto 3, but the one-sided score was as much the result of the mingled wrath and disgust of the Sacramento Wolves as it was of the effective pitching of four hits. Starting in the second inning with verbal protests, and fanned to fever heat by the defiant approach of Umpire Bush to the bleachers a few minutes later, and then his close decision at first when he called Jimmy Lewis out at first, the demonstration of the record-breaking Saturday crowd assumed such proportions that a riot call was sent in to police headquarters.

delegation of deputy sheriffs seated on the Sacramento bench and a riot cordon of police patrolling the front of the bleachers. An almost continuous shower of pop bottles, green lemons and oranges and other varieties of ammu-nition fell about Umpire Garnet Bush throughout the last half of the game, and he has at least one bump raised on his head as a souvenir of the ovation.

Three times during the game the bleacher fans surged forward, threatening to mob the umpire, and were only driven back by police. At the close of the game the police got their wires crossed—some people are unkind enough to say that they had little sympathy for the umpires—and a path was cleared leading off the field from the first-base side, while the umpires the first-base side, while the umpires were left to wend their way in as-sumed unconcern to their dressing-room off the third-base side.

leaving the grounds without protec-tion, upwards of 2000 fans swept across the diamond from the bleachers and grandstand and presented a solid wall of cursing and abusive humanity time the police saw their mistake and again went to the rescue. Inside the umpires' dressing-room there was an ominous slience compared with the myside, with the staccato accompaniment of occasional rocks and bottles that found their way to the frall door that stood between the pursued and the pursuers. Finally Umpire Guthrie ven-tured the opinion that he and his companion could take care of themselves and suggested that they venture forth

The door was opened a few inches and a small rock bounced off the floor at

Bush Doesn't Want to Be Hero. "Nix on the hero stuff," said Bush, feeling for the lump on the back of his head and recalling memories of the time he was chased off the field by an angry crowd of Los Angeles fans.

Guthrie looked at the rock, looked at Bush and decided that discretion was the better part of valor. About 1000 fans had gathered on the Y-street levee, Just outside the fence gate through which the umpires are wont to take their departure. Combined efforts of police and Sheriff's deputies could not disperse the crowd.

"of Only by a clever ruse was further trouble avoided. A space was cleared to for an automobile to drive up to the gate. "Here they come," shouted of the umpires' bodyguard, and crowd surged up to the gate. But "they didn't come." Suddenly the automobile started for the players' gate, on the other side of the grounds, where the ampires had quietly spirited themselves. Jumping into the automobile, the umpires were driven at a rate well above the speed limit out the Riverside road, away from the city. Whether or not they returned was not announced. The trouble was started by the de-cision of Umpire Bush when he called Lewis out at first, although every one else thought him safe, and it continued all through the game.

Rodgers' Homer Cinches Game. Portland scored three in the third with a single by Fisher, an error and Rodgers' home run. Then came the riot in the third and no more real baseball although Portland rolled up its score until the total was eight. Sacramento was beaten and helpies during the up-heaval. Wolverton and Jimmy Lewis were chased out of the lot by Bush. Krapp, for the second time of the week, held the Wolves to four hits, their two rung being the result of two walks to the first men up in the first inning, these passes being followed by a sacrifice and Van Buren's double.

ter crowds than Spokane, and if any dropping is to be done, unquestionably Spokane will be the city to suffer. The Spokane franchise has been a drag on the Northwestern magnates all year, as the trip across the mountains entails a big expenditure for transportation. Attendance has the been so poor this season that President Joseph P. Cohn retired in midseason a few weeks ago, threw up the sponge to the traction company which owns the park and retired disgusted. C. Farr, the new head of basebal affairs in Spokane, was a Portland visitor early in the week, but it was on "railroad business," according to Fielder A. Jones, president of the Northwestern League, whose head-quarters are in this city. In the spotlight of the new developments, however, there is just a bare possibility that he had a premonition of the impending blow-up and was here trying to put in a plug for a new lease

Harry Meek does not believe in too much "system" in playing ball. Ty Cobb is said to be a good batter because he sizes up every man against him from catcher to the fielder. Cobb is said to know just what the system of each catcher who works behind him is.

He ascribes part of his success to "second sight." He watches the sphere until the very moment of delivery and. as he has made this a point from his first days of baseball, he can pretty tell what every twist of the wrist of the facing pitcher means and just where to put the cudgel so as to meet the ball.

"Never guess," says Meek, "Always know. There are just three things which a pitcher can do, to send over a curve, a fast ball or a slow ball. makes three guesses and more than half the time the man who does not know how to size up pitchers will have the wrong guess.

Fortland emphasized the "Kan" in Kantlehner along about, the sixth frame and Narveson held the locals runless the next four frames. But he had to fan Heilmann in the ninth with the bases full to save his Checking down to hard cases, only two of those five tallies in the second inning should have counted. Conroy dropped a ball at the plate and let one run trickle in; he later let a third strike percolate to the sand and another run scored, while Bobby Coltrin gummed up a grounder and that brought the total of physical miscues for the in-ning up to three.

Portland also had a duet of runs handed over during an opulent period, however, so the local compatriot of the hummock need cherish no ill feelings toward his wobbly backing. Mays starred at the bat with three hits. Once again the 1900 spectators were regaled with an embossment of the sin-gle umpire system. It appears that in the Northwestern League there exists a custom by which the catchers check hits down foul lines when the ump is behind the pitcher. Yesterday Backstopper Danny Shea had the crowd and Portland players calling for a disinfectant when he dubbed a two-bagger by Guigni into left a foul after Fitzgerald's registration from first base.

My! my! and all the fiery sputtering went to waste, too (the saddest feature of the wrangle), for Hellmann's double drove in both Fitz and Guigni a moment later with Portland's final two tallies.
