CHRISTY MATHEWSON TO REPORT WORLD'S SERIES FOR THE OREGONIAN

Special Accounts Daily of All Games as They Are Played to Be Telegraphed by Giant Twirler and Published Here. Writer One of Baseball's Highest Authorities.

Christy Mathewson

Northwestern baseball fans who daily peruse the sport columns of The Oregonian have another treat in store. Christy Mathewson, famous New York Giant pitcher, has been secured as special representative of The Oregonian at the world's championship battles between the New York National League pennant winners and the Philadelphia champions of the American League. These world's series battles will be fought in New York and Philadelphia, commencing the first week in October, granting that these cities win their respective titles and it looks decidedly that way. Mathewson's daily articles will augment The Oregonian's Associated Press dispatches and other special services, and, as Matty views the great battles from the "inside" angles, his feature stories should stand forth above all others. Mathewson watches his literary pitout very carefully and has won for himself a reputation of high-class production, both in the magazine and newspaper field. Matty was a star when the Athletics and Giants first clashed in their celebrated series eight years back. He has been a star pitcher ever since, and is still a star, and it will be Matty who will undoubtedly be the big noise in the impending engagements. He will be in the thick of the fray and will make his stories very intimate with events as they occur out there on the diamond.

Chadbourne's Batting Mark Is World's Record

Hal Chase's feat of hitting in 27 consecutive games eclipsed by Beaver Outfielder.

Investigation of baseball records reveals that Chester Chadbourne of Portland established a new world's record for consecutive batting when he hit safely first time up in Friday's game. That clout swelled his run to 28 consecutive games in which he secured at least one safe swat. Hal Chase first baseman on the Chicago Americans, was the former record-holder. Chase went 27 consecutive hitting games while with New York back in 1907. Chadbourne ended his run yesterday when he was up five times without a safety. On one of these trips he was whacked out by a bunt. Chad might have whacked out his hit on that occasion but the bunt tactics illustrated to what an extent individual effort is made to take a back seat to teamwork. When Chadbourne began his batting rampage back on August 25 his average for the year was .268. Chad improved this while consorting with the league leading pitchers and is now slamming them out to the tune of .281.

M'LEOD THIRD IN POLO SERIES

Final Game at Spokane Taken From Cochrane in Sharp Match.

SPokane, Wash., Sept. 20.—(Special.)—MacLeod won third honors in the first Spokane International polo tournament yesterday when it won the final game of the series from Cochrane 84 to 5. In all but the final game the MacLeod players had everything their own way, keeping the ball in Cochrane's territory continually. Immediately after the start of play Harry Evans took the ball out of a tangle in midfield and dribbling it to within about 50 feet of goal shot it straight as an arrow through the middle of the posts. After five minutes more of play, in which neither goal was seriously threatened, Guy Frount shot the ball from close to the side lines to Cap'n Harry Robertson who

Game Warden Finley Responsible for New Publication

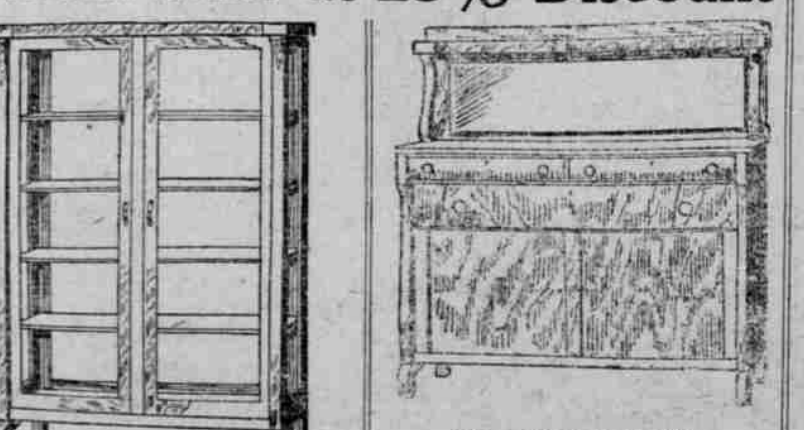

The first issue of the Oregon Sportsman, the monthly publication which William L. Finley, State Game Warden, has started, came off the press yesterday. It is an eight-page paper of magazine size, and has for a cover a photo of a yearling elk, caught in the field. The leading article is by William L. Finley, and tells of the purposes of the book. In his words: "The aim is to collect authentic records of the names of the parties who go hunting and fishing, where they go and what they get. Inasmuch as the state charges for hunting within its domain, the license payers have a right to know what is done with their money. Therefore, the work of the Fish and Game Commission will be told of each month."

Home-Run Record Claimed.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 20.—What was said to be a new record for home runs was made today by Cecil Gray, of Charleston, in an Ohio State League game with Maysville, Ky., when he made two and brought his record for the season up to 22. The former record was said to be 21.

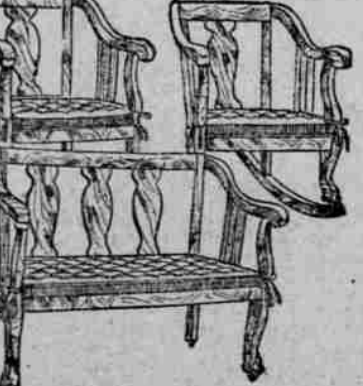

SPokane, Wash., Sept. 20.—Charles Swain, an outfielder for the Victoria Northwestern League team, has made 31 home runs this season and is given credit for holding the home run record.
