CITY GROWING FAST

Raymond Erects 171 Buildings Within One Year.

TOTAL VALUE IS $520,000

Twenty-One Business Houses and 150 Dwellings Rise in 12 Months and Only Three Places in Town Are Unoccupied.

RAYMOND, Wash., Oct. 4.—(Special.)—The past 12 months has been the best in the history of the City of Raymond, so far as actual development work is concerned. During that time there has been expended (over work commenced that calls for the expenditure of) $520,000 for buildings.

This amount does not include any improvements in the many mills located here, but is the value of new business blocks, schools, churches, apartments or other dwelling houses, and these figures do not include any improvements made in the way of new buildings in Ellis Gardens, Raymond Heights, Morris Heights or any of the outlying districts, nor do they include any street work.

The figures quoted are based on estimates made on the cost of new buildings in the district lying between the two rivers and comprising the business portion of the city with its adjoining residence section; the additions of Riverview, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth, across the South Fork and the additions lying in Riverdale.

There are in the districts named 171 buildings here that are under way or have been completed within the last 12 months. Of this total 150 are dwellings of every description from the modest one-story bungalow to the more pretentious bungalows costing $3000 each. The estimated value of these 150 houses is $274,500.

The remaining 21 new buildings are churches, apartment houses, store buildings, a blacksmith shop, an auto garage and school building, all of which are estimated to have cost $245,500, making a total of $520,000.

In securing this data there was found only three vacant dwellings in the entire district, and only one store building, the Stenzel block just completed, which was not completely occupied.
