Mud Helps Crimsons Shatter Precedent of Generation on Tigers' Field.

Old Nassau Puzzles Visitors by Brilliant Plays Until Rain Turns Quagmire. Crowd Wild After Contest.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 8 .- Harvard here today by defeating Princeton on the Tigers' own grounds by a score of s to 0. The credit for the victory goes in great part to Charles Brickley, whose solitary goal from the field gave Harvard the three points which divided victors and vanquished. Brickley's ability to score by kicking solved a into a quagmire, and by slowing up the Tiger backfield, permitted Harvard to diagnose the plays. From that point on Princeton ceased to be dangerous in guild diagnose the plays. and the only hope of a victory for the Tigers lay in some fluke play.

Princeton started with a rush, but the power to gain through the Harvard line soon melted away. The crimson grew stronger as the game drew to a close. In all Princeton scored seven first downs to Harvard's five, but this advantage was offset to some extent by the penalties imposed for offisde play. Harvard, while not guilty in this respect, lost 25 yards for holding and for sending a substitute on the field after play had been started.

When the whistle blew and the Harvard crowd realized that its team had won, hundreds of the crimson followers jumped over the four-foot fence and circled about the victors. Harvard rooters carried several of the players by the penalties imposed for offisde rooters carried several of the players from the field while others formed a parade and marched around the grid-iron, cheering and throwing their hats in the air.

Crowds Cheer Players,

They marched out of the grounds and up to the Princeton campus, cheering and singing as they proceeded.

Princeton followers did not forget their team in this hour of adversity, hundreds remaining in the stands cheering and singing "Old Nassau"

Rain fell quite heavily at intervals during the forenoon and at 1 o'clock there was another heavy shower. A little later the crowd came pouring into the big enclosure from the four corners of the field.

Harvard was the favorite as the teams lined up. The Harvard squad, 40 men, came on the field at 1:15 40 men, came on the field at 1:15 o'clock, for a short practice.

The first real cheer of the afternoon was brought forth when the Princeton team ran on the field. The Tigers looked fit for the contest. Princeton won the toss and defended the north goal. Harvard took the kick off. There were many empty seats in the stands. Harvard kicked off over the goal line and Princeton ran the bail back 33 yards, Glyck carrying the ball. Law immediately punted to Harvard's 30-yard line and Harvard ran it back eight yards before the Crimson runner was downed.

Tigers Outplay Harvard. The Tigers fairly outplayed Harvard throughout the first period and the spectators went wild with delight or spectators went wild with delight or grouned, according to their sympathies, as the sturdy Princeton linemen stopped Crimson plays or opened holes of the Orange and Black backs. Twice Princeton was close enough to try for field goals, but both attempts failed and neither side scored before the and neither side scored before the quarter ended.

The game opened with an exchange of punts, the first four of which resulted in a net gain for Harvard of six yards. Backs of both teams found the wet ball hard to handle, but there was a noticeable absence of fumbling. The rain, however, made the footing un-certain and the ends had little trouble in stopping the runners.

Kicking Game Played.

Kicking Game Played.

Finally, Hardwick kicked high and short for Harvard with the ball on the home team's 42-yard line. Streit plunged through for eight and two yards in succession. Two more attacks on center and Harvard yielded another first down, then Baker's try for a drop kick was partly blocked. The Harvard kick was returned and then Princeton's line forced another first down, then Baker's try for a drop kick was returned and then Princeton's line forced another punt. Then Streit tore through wide openings in the Harvard line again, carrying the ball to the visitor's 33-yard mark, where Baker again failed on a field goal. When the quarter ended, Princeton had the ball on Harvard's 40-yard line.

Princeton went rathe visitors' line with renewed determination in the second period. Glyck and then Streit smashed through for successive gains of ten, two and five yards. Then Baker suddenly switched his attack to a wing shift. The play gained two yards and Harvard took the ball on downs on its 19-yard line, immediately kicking to midfield.

Princeton punted and then lost five yards for off-side, the first penalty of the game. Harvard returned the punt and then stopped a fake formation. Lawton's kick was blocked. Harvard recovering on the Tiger's 20-yard line.

Punt followed punt after Princeton's kickoff, but the kickers' duel was broken by the most speciacular play of the first half, when Mahan caught Law's punt and protected by good interference, sped 30 yards to the Princeton 25-yard line just as the sun broke through the clouds.

The rest of the period was more or less of a scramble in the mud, although at one time, Law's interception of a forward pass on his own 16-yard line saved Princeton from a threaten-Punt followed punt after Princeton's forward pass, which grounded, and another exchange of punts put the ball on Harvard's 48-yard line Holding cost the regretary for the control of the con forward pass, which was successfully caught, but failed to gain the distance. Three punts followed, Baker making BRICKLEY'S BOOT SCORES a fair catch on the crimson 46-yard mark. He tried for a field goal, but it failed to carry behind the five-yard zone, Brickley catching it and running 35 yards before Lamberton downed him. Undiscouraged by this fine work, the Tigers continued their desperate right. After an exchange of kicks, Glyck intercepted a forward pass on his own 47-yard line.

Baker's shot to Hammond put the ball in crimson territory again, but offside play spoiled the gain and Law punted to within seven yards of Harvard's goal as the period ended.

Kicks for Goal Fail.

Fourth period-Hardwick punted shattered an ancient football tradition from behind his own goal and the ball ability to score by kicking solved a football problem for the Crimson which the mud and rain would otherwise have baffled.
