lives with a man of the social world, who receiving a diplomatic appoint-ment, abandons her. The unfortunate girl, left in poverty, falls under the sway of a Salvation Army girl, who sway of a Salvation Army girl, who procures for her a position in an aristocratic family. There she enlists the sympathy of a man who, prior to that time, had been indifferent to the opposite sex. She marries him and bearshim a beautiful boy. The diplomat, who is the husband's friend, returns and the secret of the woman's past is revealed to the husband. The heart-broken husband drives her forth and takes from her her boy. She dies, after takes from her her boy. She dies, after having once more clasped her boy to her heart. The husband repents when it is too late.

Another feature of an entirely different and lighter vein is "Uncle John to the Rescue," which is a comic domestic entanglement of a trite and humorous nature. In this, however, the morous nature. In this, however, the differences are amicably settled. "Piano Making" is an exceedingly interesting industrial picture, while "General Bunco's Victory" is a satirical burlesque on the amateur soldier.

With clever music and a beautiful new comfortable house, and the most new comfortable house, and the most complete, courteous attendants, the Star at once leaped into the front rank among the splendid motion-picture theaters in this city.

'MIDNIGHT CALL' IS TENSE PLAY

Columbia Theater Offers Varied Bill Beginning Today.

That the extent of a man's heroism cannot always be measured properly by his actions is shown in a Pathe photo-play entitled "A Midnight Call," which is scheduled as an attraction on the bill opening today at the Columbia. It is a play that carries a distinct heart appeal and an example of noble selfsacrifice. It has many tense and highly dramatic situations. The story con-cerns a young man who has a horror for the water because he was nearly drowned in the ocean when a child. His sweetheart is overturned in a boat, his college chum goes to the rescue and he is looked upon as a coward. In after years he becomes a physician and willingly gave his life to save from death little daughter of his former sweet-

"Three Babes in a Flat" is billed as one of the funniest and most highly entertaining Essanay comedies ever produced. Three young married couples take apartments in an apartment-house where no children are allowed. After a year rolls around the stork vinits each of the three apartments, and then the trouble begins. The proud young par-ents prove too much for the janitor and the childless tenants in the house, and win a decisive victory.

A splendid little Vitagraph comedy-drama with a rural setting is "Back to Eden," in which it is shown that there is no "Eden" complete without its Adam and Eve. In this "Eden," however, there are two Adams and two Eves and two pairs of happy lovers. The Pathe Weekly, with its current events in motion pictures, is on the bill.

"Motion Picture Dancing Lessons," a Kalem dim which created such a san-

Kalem film which created such a sen-sation at the Columbia two weeks ago, has been secured by the management for a return engagement beginning December 28. Since this film was shown there have been repeated demands for its reappearance.

REAL LIFE PLAY AT GLOBE

"The House of Discord" Is Powerful Biograph Drama,

How many homes are ruined by internal discord! How many lives are ruined by a suppression of love and feeling! "The House of Discord," now on at the Globe Theater, Eleventh and Washington, is a strong drama, illustrating what may happen in this kind of a home. The husband discourages his wife's evidences of love and the wife is only saved from a fatal mistake by an accident, but it caused her years better for seeing it.

New England characters and a story of rare charm and never-ending interest. Manager Baker selected "Shore the holiday season, has not been played here in many years and appeals to the surdent body of 30 members.

The Wasco High School is favored with students of dramatic talent, and each performance calls for another. The high school maintains a good iterary and debating society which sorves as a valuable asset to the student body of 30 members. The three plays brought into the special school fund $424 gross receipts, which, less expenses, netted $220. This How many homes are ruined by in-It had occurred primarily through her reaching maturity. The mother's insistence separated the child from her environment. Love and understanding did the rest.

An elegant educational Pathe nature film is "Birds of the Marshes," a com-plete showing of these birds and their young in the native spots.

Colored views of Naples, Italy, are beautiful, Cutey and Lillian Walker are seen in a sparkling comedy, "The The fashion plates, received direct from Paris, are already a feature at the Globe.

restaurant with her cousin for a little luncheon and meets Claudine and Garidel. Claudine is equal to the emergen-cy, for she says she is the wife of Don-didier, a dealer in antiques in Paris, and on his behalf was to transact busi-ness with Guridel. The young man hints incidentally that Dondidier is the much-talked-about satyr. much-talked-about satyr.

In the second act all the characters are found in the shop of Dondidier in Paris. Dondidier no sooner starts in to do his share of the deceiving than his wife confronts him with what she believes to be proofs of his wickedness. Trouble files quick and fast, but all ends happily in the final act, the scene of the nymphs and satyrs ball.

CHRISTMAS OFFERING TOLD

Ideal Holiday Play, "Shore Acres,"

Is Underlined at Baker Theater. An ideal Christmas play is "Shore Acres," which will be the offering of the Baker Players Christmas week, commencing next Sunday matines. It is a New England drama, the first seen here in a long time. It is the play in which the celebrated James Herne which the celebrated James Herne achieved his greatest success. "Shore Acres" is a beautiful and charming blend of comedy and pathos, and the hero, old Uncle Nat, is only a plain backwoods farmer, but seldom has the English-speaking stage been graced by three a more lovable character.

It is typically a home play and one that appeals to all classes. One of the well-known features is the genuine turkey dinner, every detail of which is in strict accordance with old-fashioned New England customs so dear to the turkey dinner, every detail of which is in strict accordance with old-fashioned New England customs, so dear to the paid admissions for the last perform-
