CHAT AND GOSSIP OF PLAYS AND PLAYERS

EDITED BY LEONE CASS BARR.

TRIXIE FRIGANZA, the plump comedienne, and Ralph Herz, who besides being famous as a funder is the ex-husband of Lulu Glaser, are both out of the cast of the new Winter Garden show. Miss Friganza, report says, is negotiating with the Gaiety Theater management in San Francisco for a stay of 10 weeks there at $300 weekly.

Oliver Morosco has written a letter for publication. It answers directly a great many letters that are written to this department asking for information about plays, and play writing. Mr. Morosco's New York address is Longacre building, Forty-second and Broadway. His Los Angeles address is Burbank Theater. His letter follows: "To People Who Write, and to People Who Act: I want plays of youth. I believe that the artistic taste of the American public is the healthiest in the world, and therefore I am searching only for those plays which are clean, wholesome and sweet. In comedies, I have faith only in those comedies whose humor is essentially in the characters and their situations; comedies not devoid of dramatic situation and incident; comedies not cold and glittering, but those in which smiles and laughter are intermingled with tears and heart-throbs—human comedies.

"I desire to correspond with professional people of energy, originality and ambition. I want youthful people for youthful parts, providing they have a certain amount of experience.

"I want to find another author who can unroll sunshine and laughter and love as J. Hartley Manners unrolled them when he wrote 'Peg o' My Heart,' which the art of Laurette Taylor has made the most successful comedy in the world."

Sarah Bernhardt is playing in a new play, one written by Tristan Bernard. The title is "Jeanne Darc," and is proving a great success in Paris at the Theater Sarah Bernhardt. Bernhardt's role is that of an aged woman. The theme is mother love.

A French version "Baby Mine" has been produced at the Bouffes Parisiens. It is called "Bebe." The French folk like it.

J. Hartley Manners, author of "Peg o' My Heart," has written "Devil Montagu" for vaudeville production by Frank Kemble Cooper, of the John Drew Company.

J. Hartley Manners is married to Laurette Taylor, who made "Peg o' My Heart" famous for Oliver Morosco.

Robert Wayne, heavy man with the Baker Players last season, has been engaged by the Lieblers for the role of Fetiphah in "Joseph and His Brethren."

Ernest George Montague Shipman, of San Francisco, better known to his friends as Ernie, theatrical manager and former husband of Roselle Knott, an actress, admitted yesterday at his New York office, 110 West Forty-third street, that he had been one of the principals in a marriage which took place one Thursday afternoon in North Bergen, N. J. Mr. Shipman married Helen Foster Barham, formerly leading woman in one of his companies, and more recently a writer of film scenarios, vaudeville sketches and other things for the stage under the name of Nell Shipman. The manager said yesterday that he had merely married his wife over again. And thereby hangs a tale.

"In 1909," he said, "I went West and obtained a divorce in California. Then I married Helen Foster Barham out there. That was in 1910.

"My lawyer, Thomas McMahon, told me that my California divorce might not be recognized here in New York.

"Of course, you understand, we considered my California divorce entirely legal and our wedding out there absolutely regular. However, it was such a simple thing to be married over again that we just went over to Jersey and had another ceremony."

Definite moves are being made toward the carrying out of the contract which Eugene Walter signed in San Francisco recently with J. D. Williams, of Sidney, to form a company for Australia to be seen in a repertoire of Eugene Walter's plays.

Mr. Walter, who is to recruit the son, Mrs. Walter, who is Charlotte Walker, will be seen next season in a dramatization of Jack London's story, "The Valley of the Moon." Mr. London will collaborate with Eugene Walter in preparing the stage version.

An eye witness to the drowning of the two children of Isadora Duncan in Paris last April was describing the horror of that distressing scene the other day.

"And the saddest thing about it all was that those little lives could have been saved just as well as not," he said. "It is almost difficult to breathe in Paris without a permit from the officials. Guards are everywhere on duty and they must be notified and a permit to act obtained in cases of accident or trouble of any kind. On the day these children were drowned—at the very moment, in fact, two men, seeing the car plunge over the banks of the Seine, attempted to jump in after it. They could have opened the doors and released the prisoners, who would have risen immediately to the surface.

but just as the first man was about to jump a guard held him back. 'No,' he said, 'the proper authorities have been notified—help will soon be here.' It was nearly an hour later that the bodies were brought to the shore, and one of the little fellows was not yet dead."

Frederick F. Schrader and Lyman O. Fiske have acquired a controlling interest in the New York Dramatic Mirror, the leading dramatic and motion-picture weekly in the United States. Mr. Schrader will continue to be the editor and Mr. Fiske business manager of the paper. The Mirror was established January 4, 1879, and under its present business and editorial management has attained one of the most prosperous stages of its career of 35 years. The paper boasts that during the past six months it has enjoyed a larger advertising patronage than in 15 years preceding. Its editorial columns are distinguished by a vigorous policy with regard to all live questions affecting the theater and the motion-picture industry in the United States.

GABY DESLYS NEXT SUNDAY

Noted Actress Comes to Hellig for Two Performances Only.

Surrounded by her numerous retinue, and bringing her fabulous collection of gowns and her many changes of costume, Gaby Deslys will be seen at the Hellig Theater next Sunday, January 11, at a special matinee and night performance in a modern three-act musical play entitled "The Little Parisienne." She will give only two performances in Portland.

She will be supported by the Winter Garden Company, including such well-known players as Harry Plicer, Charles Angelo, Forrest Huff, Fritzl, Von Busing, Edgar Atchison-Ely, Louise Meyers, Hattie Kneitel, a beauty chorus and an orchestra of 18 pieces.

This is Gaby's first American tour, and it is also said it will be her last, as upon the conclusion of her engagement at the Winter Garden in February, she will return to Paris, never again to be seen in this country. Of all foreign stars, she is without question, the one who has risen to the greatest heights of fame.

Not satisfied with resting on her laurels, Gaby has worked industriously to perfect her art as a singer and a dancer. Even during the Summer, when she returns to France, she is constantly at work.

This season she is seen in the prima donna role. In "The Little Parisienne" she will, of course, be given every possible opportunity to display her talent as an actress, a singer and a dancer. With Mr. Plicer she will do four or five specialties that have brought fame to both of them at the Winter Garden, and in many European music halls. Among these may be mentioned the well-known "Gaby Glide."

Coming here almost direct from Paris, Gaby brings with her many gowns that have never been worn. They are all the very latest Parisian creations. Her stage gowns are all, as in keeping with Gaby, exotic and bizarre.

"AS A MAN THINKS" IS BILL

Baker Players Will Present Augustus Thomas' Play.

The scene of high-class plays of the modern type has been reached in Augustus Thomas' "As a Man Thinks," which the Baker Players will offer for the week beginning next Sunday matinee. John Mason, the well-known star, appeared in it here last Summer at the Hellig having presented it for more than two years.

The story concerns the wife of a man of affairs, who, stung by his neglect and apparent unfaithfulness, turns to a former suitor for a time and becomes deeply compromised. A Jewish friend and physician takes deep interest in their case, and later, after the efforts of all others have been wasted, he succeeds in arousing the angry husband to a better state of mind, for it has gone so far that the man is permitting the suspicion to breed and to express doubt as to being the father of their child.

There is also a love affair between Dr. Seelig's daughter and a young architect who is a Gentle, and this plays an important part in the plot of the play.

Louis Leon Hall will remain out of the cast of the "Lottery Man" in order to prepare himself for the big Paris role of Dr. Seelig, in which the eminent actor John Mason scored so heavily. There are several other acting roles in which Mr. Hall, Miss Shoemaker and other popular members of the Baker Players will be seen to unusual advantage.

SCENE IN FAMOUS PLAY, "LEAH KLESCHNA," WHICH OPENS AT PEOPLE'S THEATER TODAY.
