

DIGGS' FRIEND HELD; TWO STILL HUNG

Prisoner Denies Guilt; Refuses to Tell Where Other Men Can Be Found.

CHORUS GIRL TELLS STORY

Actress Says She Tried to Interfere With Carousal New Year's Eve. Drinking Bout Started in Her Apartments.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—Walter Gilligan, wanted with Maury I. Diggs, ex-state architect, and a man named Fisher, on warrants charging a statutory offense against 17-year-old Ida Pearing, was arrested by police detectives in a hotel here today.

Gilligan told the detectives he was Luke Howe, one of the attorneys who defended Diggs in the United States District Court a few months ago, when the architect was accused of violating the Mann white slave law, but when he saw his story wound up, he knew where they were. He said Fisher was a married man.

Gilligan is in the wholesale paper business. He said he had been in his room since he learned that a warrant was out for him.

New Year's Party Starts Trouble. Gilligan was drunk when arrested, the police said. He denied having assaulted Miss Pearing.

Lillian Sullivan admitted today that she had been a member of the New Year's eve party and she identified Diggs by a photograph as the man who had been persistent that evening in his efforts to kiss Miss Pearing.
