

NEWSPAPER MEN VISITED BY SPOOKS

Reporters "Covering" Meeting of Spiritualists Get Messages of "Sympathy."

PENCIL WELDERS DEFIED

Mediums "Vibrate" With Words of Late Folk Now in Great Beyond, Despite Presence of Writers and Spirits Cut Capers.

NEW YORK, March 7.—It was newspaper men's "old home week" at the mass meeting of the New York Association of Spiritualists. Not only did all the speakers and producers of messages in public, no matter how many reporters might be in the room. There were four.

What arouses the loyal reported is this: They didn't stop with the reporters, but opened their batteries on copy editors, also, and George Ehrhardt, of Buffalo, confided in the ear of a reporter that he had been a real friend to a copy editor in Fort Wayne, Ind., and, moreover, on the preceding day, had done the same work in message bringing as was being done while he whispered, and was consequently, entitled to honorable mention by all newspapers which employ copy editors.

None of the messages were addressed by name, but there was an elaborate description of each sender, and although there were more than 1000 persons in the room, she found someone who recognized the signature of each, in or near the front row. Those in the front row who were skipped looked as disappointed as a strange boy at a Christmas tree, and waited around as though they wanted their name (address was 25 cents) back.

There was a peculiar, foreign built gold necklace had appeared to Mrs. Kates, and had appeared to an old acquaintance by the unusual formation of its costly links, which was built to represent a miniature Bible, when a pure white military spirit on a bay horse (spirit) walked up the aisle, throwing aside the speakers who sat too close, and appeared before Mrs. Kates.

Mrs. Kates saw him plainly and described him so vividly that there was a gasp of appreciation from several hundred throats. She didn't know just who he was looking for, but her description of a man of feline glance and lion bearing, with an eye like Mars to threaten and command, was so true to so many fond recollections that 18 women claimed him at once.

Considerable commotion was caused by the intrusion of the spirit of a young man carrying a baby. Nobody would claim him, and Mrs. Kates discovered that the mother of the baby was much over on the Jersey side, and had just appeared beside the other two. Then half a dozen applications were filed.

EL PASO, Tex., March 7.—When Consul Letcher left here today to return to his post at Chihuahua, it is understood that he carried instructions from Secretary Bryan with reference to the case of Luis Terrazas, Jr., who is being held for ransom by General Villa.

It is said that General Villa and General Carranza both will be informed that the State Department could not but construe the threatened execution of Terrazas as indicative of great weakness in the rebel government of Northern Mexico.

This information came from a rebel official today. The official added that the Carranza commission appointed to investigate the killing of William S. Benton was prepared to face any facts which might be unearthed derogatory to the actions of General Villa or his subordinates.

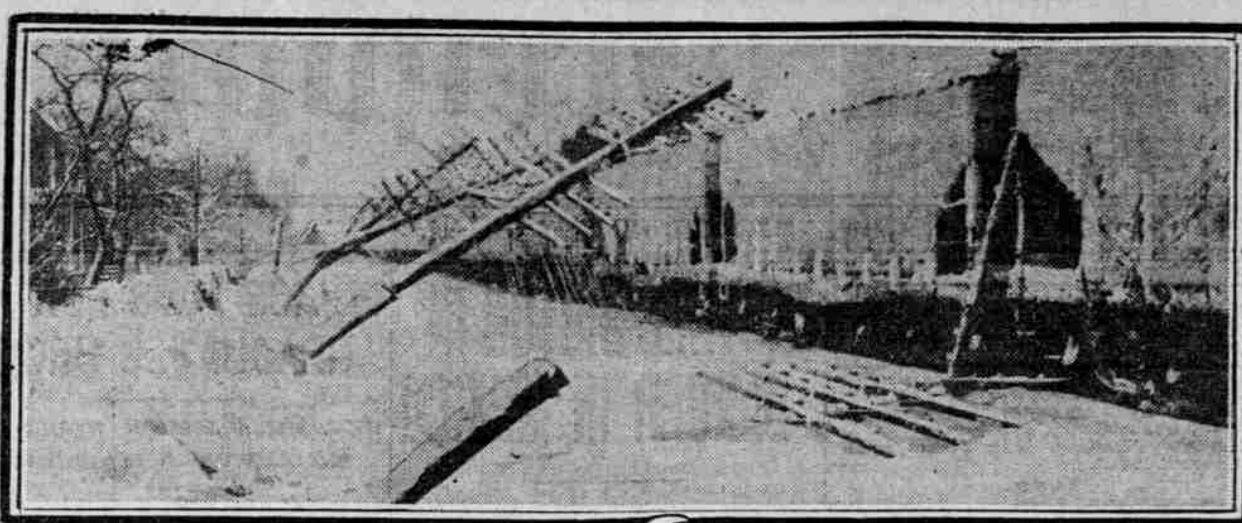

"It will not be a whitewash," he added, "and I ask you to observe particularly that the assurances given to Washington on this point have carried conviction with them."

accused Italian. Later the two miners testified that at the time the train was flagged they were attending the Indianapolis convention of the United Mineworkers of America.

In the corridor outside, John R. Lawson, strike leader, explained that the miners had known in advance that Poehlmann would be identified by the detective.

BLINDING BLIZZARD DRIVES HOMELESS TO CHURCH FOR SHELTER

NEW YORK CITY, March 7.—(Special.)—The great storm which spent its fury in the vicinity of this city, leaving a loss of life and millions of damage in its wake, was the worst snow storm experienced, not only since the "blizzard of '88," but even before that. Communication with the outside world was shut off, and the little island of Manhattan was almost entirely isolated from the outside world. The top photo shows some of the damage done to telephone and telegraph property, due to the gales which swept through the suburbs. It pictures some of the wires and poles blown down on coal cars belonging to the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Bound Brook, N. J., which is between New York and Philadelphia.

The lower photo shows one of the pathetic sides of the big storm. One hundred and twenty-five homeless men and boys sought shelter at ancient St. Mark's Church here, at second avenue and Tenth street, where, years ago, Peter Stuyvesant, first Governor of New Amsterdam, worshipped when he lived on the Bowery. The doors of the church were thrown wide open to the homeless, and in the warmth of the big Sunday-school room the hungry and cold were fed and permitted to sleep on the floor.

I would like to become acquainted with a man of good moral character who has high ideals and can appreciate the same characteristics in a woman. PEACE TREATY DISCUSSED British Ambassador Considers Possibilities With Mr. Bryan.

LONDON, March 5.—(Special.)—The alleged results of Syndicalism were told by D. A. Thomas, managing director of the Cambrian Colliery Combine, in a recent speech at Tonypandy, the scene of former strike riots. He said that Tonypandy was one of the most active centers of Syndicalism, and the local leaders of the movement were a suspicious, shallow-minded body of men.

As he had been severely attacked by them, he said, he would like to contrast the material results of his action as a capitalist with theirs since 1907, when the Cambrian Combine acquired the Glamorgan Colliery.

The population of the district had increased 22 per cent and the number of men employed in the Combine collieries had increased from 10,500 to 12,700. The amount of wages paid had increased 25 per cent, although the output of the collieries had only increased 7 per cent. Moreover, the average weekly earnings of every man and boy employed above and below ground had increased from $9.41 in 1907 to $10.50 last year.

Syndicalism, on the other hand, had engineered a strike at the Cambrian Combine Colliery, which had lasted 12 months and cost the men $5,000,000 in wages, and which had entirely depleted the funds of the South Wales Miners' Federation, and had crippled the financial position of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain. The result was that the men had to return to work on the terms offered to them when they ceased working.

During the national strike which followed the Cambrian Combine, men lost $72,000 in wages, and he estimated that it would take them another 10 years to recoup their loss by the increase they had obtained under the minimum wage act. He closed as an economic proposition that he, individually, and the same might be said of any large colliery owner—had done more to improve the material conditions of, and to provide means of subsistence for, the wives and families of the workmen in South Wales than all the miners' leaders together had done or were likely to do.

The Governor has been appealed to by several matron women to act in a similar capacity, and only a few days ago was exasperated by Miss C. Davis, of Camden, N. J., for giving a letter to her asking him to put her in communication with a "nice Western man" to the newspapers for publication, declaring that her friends would joke her about it. Miss Richards' letter is as follows:

"Someone told me you were interested in young people, that you would be glad to help them to find a suitable life companion. I am a seamstress by

It was sent to the executive department of this state by the Department of Justice in Washington. It said:

"Ask your husband to use his influence with Governor Baldwin to pardon or commute the sentence of Mrs. Bessie Wakefield to life imprisonment. I think for the sake of those little innocent children something should be done.
