

ABORIGINAL GOLFERS ARE IN GOOD TRIM

Fear Expressed That Englishmen Allow Business to Interfere With Sport.

CRACKS TAKE NO PRACTICE

British Possibilities Discussed and Papers Urge Players to Get in Form for Tussle, Which Promises to Be Keen.

As he contemplates his amateur golf championship this year, John Bull feels like a man stymied. There's the world's championship staring him in the face, but how the deuce he is going to get past those blasted Americans who are in his way, goodness only knows.

It is a long time since the English were placed confident that no other race could beat them at golf. Ten years ago they got their first shock when Travis headed the field at Sandwich. Three years later they got their second when the Frenchman, Massy, beat all their professional and amateur young Francis Ouimet routed Vardon and Ray, and from that blow they have not yet recovered.

The English are at last beginning to ask themselves why they have to put up against Ouimet, Travers, "Chick" Evans, Lockwood, Herreshoff and the rest of the American invaders. The London newspapers are beseeching the defenders to prepare themselves for the coming ordeal.

English Not Preparing. So far, it seems, not one of the cracks on the other side has done anything to get himself into real shape for the championship. In the meantime Ouimet is driving terrific tee shots over the championship course at Sandwich, and Travers is hammering away with his wooden clubs somewhat as if he were a professional.

One hesitates to think that the British players are allowing their business to interfere with their preparation. The alternative—that our players do not take golf as seriously as do the Americans—is not more comforting.

According to Harry Vardon, England has not so many first-class amateurs as she had ten years ago. He blames the rubber-core ball for that, for it took a man of patience and determination to master the putting. England frankly admits that patience and determination have been applied by the first-class American amateurs in mastering the new ball.

The expert on the other side think, nevertheless, that they have a few players who have a "reasonable" chance of success against the Americans. There are several according to the "book," ought to beat them.

Ball "Punch Bitter." There is, for instance, they point out, John Ball, eight times champion, and still in the field for several months' championship. It is notorious that Mr. Ball takes an interest in a match only when something really difficult has to be done to insure victory, and so the English are relying on him, if need be, to keep the title in Great Britain.

There is also Harold Hilton, with his four championships, and his experience of the play of American golfers. There is Robert Harris, too, last year's runner-up, who is certainly due a championship. There are also several foreign critics who strongly fancy Mr. Harris' chances.

Perhaps the year's necessity for leaving nothing to luck will induce Robert Maxwell to enter. Mr. Maxwell is not fond of playing in championship meetings, but he certainly would be hoped, he may conquer his dislike. Mr. Larsen must not be left out of account. In some respects his game, we understand, is better than that of Travers. He is not a long driver; he is an excellent putter; he plays with dogged determination, and gives much thought to his strategy.

For one thing we must hand it to the English, and that is their easy confidence. "The chances," we are told, "are all in favor of a British victory, but the British players will have to lose no time in getting into the links."

The Brits are better prepared than there is the slightest probability of the Americans practicing themselves into the form they will need in plenty of time to enjoy rest before the great struggle begins.

PENOBSCOT TO DEFEND TITLE. Keen Contest Over Steeplechase Honors Expected This Year. NEW YORK, May 2.—One of the keenest contests on the New York race track this year is expected to be the scramble to dethrone Penobscot as the champion steeplechaser. This five-year-old son of Yankee and Courtplaster is the star of the R. T. Wilson stable. The president of the Saratoga Racing Association has the largest stable of horses now quartered about the metropolitan waiting for the opening of the season at Belmont Park on May 26, and all of them are now working out on the track when the weather permits.

Altogether there are 31 horses in his string, with Tom Healey as trainer-in-chief. Healey is giving nearly half his attention to Penobscot, however, as the competitor for his crown promises to wax warm.

Allan Pinkerton and F. Ambrose Clark are expected to prove the strongest competition with Gold Plate and Peregrine Pickle. The latter made his mark in Ireland but little is known here of his jumping ability. Gold Plate has faced the barrier 26 times in New York and vicinity and has come home in front no less than 14 times, though carrying top weight much of the time. An officer of the Jockey Club said today that he had kept tab on all likely candidates for appearance at Belmont Park and that nearly 1200 horses are sure to be seen under colors at the meeting.

Centralia Moose Are Defeated. CENTRALIA, Wash., March 2.—(Special.)—In a game of ball yesterday afternoon the Centralia Moose team was defeated by a team of Tacoma Northwest League castoffs. The score was 5 to 4. Joe Berger, who won the 1913 State League pennant for Centralia, pitched for Tacoma. There was a large turnout of fans to see him perform.

Garden City Golf Tourney Opens. NEW YORK, May 2.—Only one golf tournament remains for candidates for the metropolitan amateur championship to grasp as an opportunity for whetting up their batting eyes. That is the annual invitation tourney at Garden City, next Thursday.

being the most prominent, now that Jerry Travers and Fred Herreshoff are in England. Travers is the present holder of the metropolitan title, an honor his absence will compel him to relinquish, as well as the New Jersey championship, competition for which is scheduled at Morris County links June 4.

Boxing "Queered" at Morton.

MORTON, Wash., May 2.—(Special.)—It is unlikely that there will be any more boxing at Morton soon under the guise of smokers by the athletic club. At the last one held this week considerable money was wagered and in the fifth round of the go between Erwin Lewis and Dave Powell, the former was believed by those present to have thrown the match to his adversary and afterward was openly accused of doing so. J. A. Strong, manager of the Morton gym, has announced that he will not entertain a proposition to hold any more smokers. Morton will now devote his time to baseball.
