ment house, and one day the junior partner sought his colleague in some triplicate.

"The janitor wants $10 more per month or he'll leave. I hate to give up the money, but we can't spare him."

The senior partner disappeared and returned in a few moments.

"It's all right," said he. "I've satisfied him and it didn't cost us anything."

"How's that?"

"The janitor is now the superintendent."

"Good work!" declared the junior partner. "But why didn't you make him superintendent in the first place?"

"Because," answered the senior member, "I knew he'd want a promotion eventually. Every man wants a promotion some time, and to my mind, a good man deserves one."

Rubber Flowers Adorn New Bathing Costumes

Fashion Maker's Ingenuity Enables Ocean Dippers to Enter Surf With Truly Becoming Gossamer Bouquet.

ONE may wear a corsage bouquet into the sea this year—the sort of flowers that thrive in salt water, for they are made of rubber and will look as gay and fresh when they come out of the briny deep as when they were in. There are violets, roses and gardenias, in natural colorings, bearing a surprising resemblance to the real flowers at a little distance and green stems and leaves are not forgotten.

A smart bathing dress of black pussy-willow taffeta, with a deep V over a chemise of white machine embroidery in close rows of narrow, wide girles is tucked a deep red rose and the shirred black taffeta cap also bears a red rose at one side. Another bathing dress of gossamer gray pussy-willow taffeta has countless ruffles piped with white. Against the gray taffeta corsage clusters of rubber violets is exceedingly effective.

Yellow and burnt onion motor veils are as fashionable as yellow and burnt onion parasols. The smart motor veil is a high affair, at least two and a half yards long and finished with a hemstitched hem two inches deep. A skimp veil can spoil the effect of the most expensive motor bonnet and coat. Some women sew small snap fasteners to the brim of the motor bonnet and also to several veils, so that a change may be effected quickly when the costume calls for a particular color, or when one veil has become dirty or dusty midway of the trip and one wishes to freshen up a bit before entering a restaurant.

Callot Soeurs have brought out an 1880 reincarnation that is proving popular for several seasons. The model have been ordered through the firm who exhibited the frock in this country. Above a skirt of black, green, alternating black and magenta pussy-willow taffeta, is a bona fide "basque" fitted with darts and buttoning straight down the front. The three upper flounces of the skirt are distended on hoops and with the costume goes a tilted Watteau hat of black straw, trimmed with a long black ribbon streamer and a red rose matching the magenta silk in the frock.

Little Money Goes Long Way for Flowers Now

Big Clusters Not Necessary for Effective Home Displays—Style of Vase Factor in Making Showings.

THE woman with true home-making instincts realizes the value of fresh flowers on the dinner table and even if but 25 cents a week may be spared for table decoration, flowers of the season are secured, somehow or other to lend grace and charm to the family board. It is not necessary to fill a big vase with an elaborate display of blossoms—especially when flowers are high in price. A single rose, a couple of chrysanthemums, three golden yellow jonquils, with a bit of fern or asparagus, will work wonders in adding distinction to the dinner table, set out with spotless cloth and shining silverware.

Just now flowers are at their cheapest and it costs twice a week will purchase enough to make a charming centerpiece. Vases and jars of various sizes, shapes and colorings should be kept on hand and these will add this not inconsiderable measure of charm in combination with the flowers. A bunch of Spring violets in one of the little brass baskets which are sold in handles makes a dainty table center on a white embroidered centerpiece. Pink jonquils in tall slender vases, tankard breathe the essence of Spring. Lilies of the valley in their spiked green leaves are loveliest in a glass vase. Tulips in blue and white and white and blue pottery are something to conjure by. Lilies are exquisite in a jar of ivory white plaster or in an iridescent glass. The softest of lilac tones of the blossoms. Pink roses or red roses best become a tall vase of clear or iridescent glass. Tea roses will look well in the blue and white jug aforementioned. Pansies and nasturtiums should be arranged in a low bowl, with overhanging leaves around its edge. Daisies should be in a pale green or brass bowl. And so on, through the year. Even the humble pink clover has its timely place on the table of the woman who loves flowers and there are great possibilities in pussy willow sprays, Autumn foliage and dogwood, ferns from the woods, white pine, heavy and clinging, and other flowers that cost only a little trouble to obtain.

Convenient Device for "Putting Away" Lace and Embroidery That Won't Fold May Be Made Easily.

EMBROIDERED or lace-trimmed centerpieces should be ironed flat and rolled up, not folded, for putting away. If desired a very little boiled starch may be added to the last rinsing water, but the centerpiece will look handsomer if simply wrung out of hot water and dried while wet with a very hot iron. Several centerpieces may be rolled once over a length of broomstick or any other stick of suitable size and length. Newspapers made into a long, smooth roll will answer if there is nothing else handy.

BELGIAN TOBACCO BOOMED

Made-at-Home Smoking Contest to Be Held With King as Patron.

BRUSSELS, April 30.—King Albert, who is a lover of tobacco, has accepted an honorary membership of a dozen different Belgian pipe-smoking clubs. Next month a great pipe-smoking tournament will open simultaneously in Brussels, Antwerp, Ghent and Liege. Prizes, including a magnificent meerschaum pipe offered by the King, will be competed for, the winners being those who smoke the greatest number of pipes in a given time.

New Belt Completes Shiny Makeup of My Lady

Latest Model Is Black and Polished, Is Made of Oilcloth and Costs $10 or $12.

Belts Shine Like Boots and Bonnets.

SHINY is my lady from top to toe these Spring days. Her hat is trimmed smartly with the new lacquer ribbon that is as crisp and glazed as polished stovepipe; her pretty buttoned boots are of gleaming patent leather, topped with jaunty uppers of contrasting cloth, and now her belt also is black and polished and is made of— in police parlance—glace leather; in ordinary terms, black oilcloth of thin, supple quality.

These shiny belts are extremely smart and are worn over tailored coats and with trotteur frocks of serge, mohair and worsted mixtures and black pussy-willow taffeta. The bows are made in various ways. A bow of one kind is used when the belt accompanies a frock, and a flat, rather wide butterfly bow when the belt is worn over a tailored coat. These new shiny belts are as expensive as faddish things are apt to be, the simplest models costing $10 and $12.

New Boot Has Long Sharp Toe and Curved Heel

Stubbiness Is One Thing Footwear May Not Have and Retain Claim to Smartness.

New Pumps With Long Line.

STUBBINESS is the one thing that a boot or slipper may not have now and retain any claim to smartness and correctness of style. All the lines of footwear suggest slimmness, narrowness, the sort of foot that has always been associated with patrician birth and the bluest of blue blood.

Everybody knows that a long, narrow shoe makes the foot look better and feel better than a short, thick shoe, yet the hideous "bulldog" shoe could be ordered one or two sizes smaller than any other sort of shoes with a toe of average length. Now the long, narrow toe is the thing and women are willing to buy footwear one or two sizes too long in order to make the most of narrowness and slenderness of effect.

A new pump is an up-to-date model of patrician leather and has the extremely long, pointed toe of the moment, the moderately high curved heel and the small, wedge-shaped tongue which gives the Colonial effect.

New for Spring also are buttoned boots of white buckskin with curved heels, long pointed toes and very light turnish soles, which will be keeping with the very dainty and airy effect of smart lingerie frocks.

Berardo has been formed in the heart of the Alps of the Dauphine, with an area of 37,500 acres. With the assistance of the Ministry of Agriculture another 25,500 acres will be added to this reserve, and will carry its boundaries as far as Mount Pelvoux.

This park will serve as an object lesson of the restorative and regenerative powers of Nature when protected from the destroying forces of mankind, and the association is issuing an eloquent appeal for further support to enable it to carry on its campaign. This reserve, it hopes, will be the first of a series of similar parks in various parts of France which will preserve unimpaired the beauties of Nature.

BANDITS KILL OFFICERS

Tribes Wage Battle With British Troops on Sudan Borders.

KHARTOUM, April 30.—(Special.)—A recent fight with outlaws on the Atbara River, 60 miles southeast of Khartoum, resulted in the death of Major James Conry, of the Connaught Rangers. For some time measures have had to be taken against the wild bands who infest this part of the Sudan, far away from railway communications and troop centers. There is no doubt that brigandage and slave-trading flourish in some of the remote districts, in spite of the measures adopted by General Sir Reginald Wingate.

The center of the disturbing influence lies on the Abyssinian border of the Sudan, from the point where the River Atbara enters the Amhara district. The border is a narrow strip where the Blue Nile and other southern rivers cross the frontier. Having no effective central control applied to them, the border tribes of Abyssinia have taken to organized brigandage. These tribesmen cross into the Sudan with impunity in search of loot and slaves, and sharp skirmishes occur with the native troops. The latter manage to keep their districts fairly clear, but without the loss now and again of a party and from time to time of a gallant officer serving his period of two years away from all the paths of civilization. There are many British Sudanese now in slavery in Abyssinia, far beyond the possibility of rescue, and the raids into Anglo-Egyptian territory from time to time secure for the tribesmen many fresh batches.

A large tract on the Abyssinian border has been depopulated in consequence, and as a result the raiders are compelled to come further into the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

It is understood that the question of a new railway has been discussed and that it is probable arrangements will be made to carry the present line from Sennar, on the Blue Nile, south of Khartoum, to the borders of Abyssinia. No doubt such a railway would aid in pacifying the lawless district.

BREACH WITH RUSSIA WIDE

Sweden Said to Be Expecting Trouble From Czar.

COPENHAGEN, April 29.—(Special.)—The political situation as between Russia and Sweden is alleged to be serious, despite all official assurances. A violent campaign has been started against Russia by the Swedish press, in consequence of what are declared to be extensive and menacing military measures in Finland, and the leading Liberal Stockholm paper, "Artonblad," states that these measures are connected with a war against Sweden which Russia is preparing.

METHODS TO PRESERVE AND CAN RHUBARB TOLD

"Cold Water Canning" Gives Product That in January Will Supply "Spring Acid"—Other Ways and Modifications Also Explained.

BY LILIAN TINGLE.

RHUBARB is one of the few materials for which the "cold water method" of canning is usually successful. Of course rhubarb may be canned by the usual "open pan" or "cooked in the jar" methods, but the simplicity of the cold water or boiling water canning is attractive and with ordinary care the results are generally good.

First wipe the rhubarb, if very tender, or "string" it a little if necessary, and cut it into lengths to fit your jars, and have the jars, lids and everything that touches the rhubarb sterilized in the usual manner. Next rinse the rhubarb with the faucet if you are sure of the purity of your water, or in boiled and cooled water, if necessary. Pack closely into the jars, fill to overflowing with boiling water, being sure there are no air bubbles, and seal the jars at once. That is all. Be sure there are no leaks, and inspect the rhubarb from time to time. Usually "cold water rhubarb" or "boiling water rhubarb" put up as above will keep well into January or February, when one is glad of the "Spring acid" of an early rhubarb pie.

As it is neither cooked nor sweetened for canning, it should be used, when open, as if it were fresh, and will need cooking and sugar to taste.

Canned rhubarb done by the "open pan" method also requires very carefully sterilized cans. The rhubarb is prepared and cut in inch lengths and quickly cooked until tender, with or without sugar, in an ordinary preserving kettle or "baked" in a casserole.

LEMON AND RHUBARB JAM—Two and one-half quarts rhubarb, 1 lemon, 2 pounds sugar.

Wipe and cut up the rhubarb, squeeze the juice from 1 lemon and chop the rind very fine in the food chopper. Cook rind and rhubarb together until the former is tender, then add the sugar and cook until thick.

Rhubarb and Fig Preserves—Six pounds rhubarb wiped and cut in inch lengths, 1 pound dried figs cut in pieces, 5 pounds sugar, juice and grated rind of 3 lemons, 1 pound candied orange peel (home made or otherwise) and small put the fruits and sugar together over night. Then cook slowly about one hour. The candied orange peel may be omitted or 1 cup nut meats may be added.

Variation of flavor may be obtained by using the rhubarb and figs, or dates or powdered ginger to taste. Boil up with the juice of 1 lemon only, or by cooking a piece of dried root ginger in the syrup. The ginger should be removed before putting the marmalade in glasses.

Pineapple and Rhubarb Jam—Use 1 can grated pineapple with 5 pounds rhubarb and 5 pounds sugar. Cook about 1 hour after the sugar is dissolved.

Old-fashioned Rhubarb and Ginger Preserves—Cut firm red sticks of rhubarb in 4-inch lengths. Use equal weights sugar and rhubarb. Arrange in layers and let stand 2 days, with or without powdered ginger to taste. Boil up once and let stand over night. Repeat this until the rhubarb is firm, transparent and well flavored with ginger and the syrup is thick, heavy and clinging. Then put up in glasses.

Raspberry and rhubarb jam is useful as an economy when you have rhubarb in your own garden but must buy the berries, or when berries are very high in price. Use 4 pounds red raspberries and 6 pounds cut up rhubarb and 5 pounds sugar. Let stand to draw the juice as above, then boil until of desired firmness.
