ROAD BONDS GAIN FRIENDS IN MARION

Push Campaign Vigorously to Last Day.

OPPOSITION

Meetings Are to Be Held Tonight at Centerville, Champoeg, Haysville, Aurora and Parkersville.

Questions Are Answered.

IS

BY ADDISON BENNETT. SALEM, Or., May 3 .- (Staff Cor respondence.) -As the first week of the campaign for good roads in Marion County draws to a close the success of the good roads advocates seems brighter. But there is to be no relaxaare working for the bond issue. In-deed, the campaign will gain each day in strength and numbers until next Friday, when the last meetings will be held, the election taking place the day after, at the same time as the priafter, at the same time as the primary election.

Tonight meetings will be held at Centerview schoolhouse, Champoeg, Haysville schoolhouse, Aurora and Parkersville schoolhouse, and this afternoon at West Woodburn. There will be two or more speakers at each meeting.

Reports from the various meetings held last night show that the opposition to the bond issue is fast ebbing away. After the addresses are delivered at each meeting, it has been the custom to permit those wanting to ask questions, which are answered by one of the speakers or others in favor of the bonds. These questions give one a good idea of the strength of the opposition, and is sure that many of the questions are silly in the extreme

One Question Quoted

One often asked is:

"Why not ruise the tax levy for Your or five years and save the miney to pay cash for these roads?"

When one considers that the burden would then practically all fall upon the farmers, whereas under the proposed bond issue the farmers only pay a third of the cost, and that even under the present iax rate there is a tremendous howl about high taxes from the farmers; it will be seen how foolish is this question.

The meeting last night at the Grange Hall on North Howell Frairie was typical of many of the meetings. The little hall was packed, and there were not over half a dozen minors in the audience. It had been reported to Mr. Scott that great opposition would be encountered there, but the questions did not pertray such a condition. It is true one cranky individual present from him County, made a flery harangue, but as he contradicted himself several times in the course of his speech and stated the present roads were good enough for him or anybody else, that such roads would not increase the farmers' crops or raise the prices, his oratory probably made instead of lost friends for the bond advocates.

Bank Profits Cited.

A sort of stock argument of the opponents is that the money paid into the sinking fund will be loaned to the banks at 2 per cent, and they will promptly loan it back to the farmers would prefer getting it through the banks at that rate rather than borrow it from the county at 6 per cent is something these people do not touch upon.

After all the arguments, pro and con,

After all the arguments, pro and con have been deduced, the gist of the matter seems to simmer down to this proposition: Marion County has annually expended nearly $200,000 a year on the county roads, practically all of which has gone for patching the county highways, and still there are no really good roads in the county. The old good roads in the county. roads in the county The old system has proved a rank failure. A change must be made, if the county is ever to have a system of good roads; that is certain. If the present levy is continued, rather if the same amount is continued, rather if the same amount is taised each year hereafter, the bonds can be retired when due and the County Court will have about $125,000 a year left to keep the permanent roads in repair and for extension of the system. Under the present taxation system. Under the present taxation system, the farmers pay the major portion of the road tax; under the bonding system, the cities and corporations and timber interests pay two-thirds of it and the farmers one-third. So just why a farmer can vote against the bond issue it is difficult to explain.

These are the arguments brought out by Mr. Scott and his forces and they will surely bear good fruit on election

Study the Masterpieces in Furniture Displayed to Advantage in This Store OThe world is full of clever furniture, which appears well on the surface, but does not stand the test of time. It may be possible for even the judicious purchaser to judge it correctly by a superficial examination. But if a high-grade shop-mark is taken as a guiding mark, no mistakes will be made in selection. The shop-marks of such makers as Berkey & Gay, of Grand Rapids, and Cowan, of Chicago, are assurances of quality in furniture that create a keen desire for acquisition and association. There are other makers whose productions bear like evidences of substantiality-good for years and generations to come. Such is the character of furniture that finds its way into this store; authentic in design, fine in material, honest and excellent in workmanship. Broaden your knowledge of what is good in furniture by examining the many productions that are shown here. And remember-that the "good" in furniture does not necessarily mean expensive in furniture, for one finds here many splendid and authentically designed pieces and suites at
