Williams Beats Himself. As was the case when Williams met Wilding, the erratic young American really beat himself, for he netted ap-proximately three times as many shots as Brookes and drove the ball out twice as often. His habit of serving the second ball as fast as the first also counted heavily against him, for he had ter witnessed in an amateur sporting event in this country. Brookes Grows Peevish.

All through the third set every brilliant stroke by Williams was cheered until the uproar, a typical American case of reoting, could heard far across the Long Isl plains. Brookes, unable to handle Wil liams' service and returns, grew peev-ish and several times dropped his racquet and placed his hands over his

Brookes Pleased as a Boy. After his victory Brookes was pla-cated with cheer after cheer, and when he went over and patted the Davis cup 55 59 482 which stood upon a table between the 51 89 474 courts, the crowd attempted to give the Australian kangaroo ery, koo-yo-oo, in honor of the winner. This broke down the last of Brookes' reserve, and he laughed and waved his hand like a
