His lowest mark was touched last match with J. T. Tuesday, when, in a match with J. T. Keena, he turned a 72, which, really, forms a record for the links. It is the record score over the revised links for any club member or for any golfer of H. Chandler Egan, of Medford, Or. This 72 came after Potter had turne

To analyze the 72: The outward trip was made in 34 and the return in 38. Going out three putts were taken only at the sixth and the ninth greens, the player having gotten home with his drive at the sixth and was on with his second at the sixth and was on with his second at the ninth. Not one putt was fluked on this or the second nine. The long game was extraordinarily long and the putting was quite deadly. And that 38 on the return trip was made with a seven at the 14th, where a ball was lost off the tee. For the benefit of his medal score Potter rea ball was lost on the tee. For the benefit of his medal score Potter re-turned to the tee and played another. In this way accumulating his seven strokes for the hole.

In considering this a record score the statement is based on the fact that it is the lowest score made by a club member or a Northwest player since the course was changed as to the first nine, in the middle of June.

Incidentally Potter was breaking his own record, for this some player held the member record for the old course with a 71, made on August 3 last year. The new record was made almost on the anniversary of that former score.
