German and Japanese Residents of Portland See No Hope for Fort Folk.

WEEK SIEGE SEEMS LIMIT

Nipponese Merchant Says Situation Differs From Port Arthur and Tentons Have No Chance. Shipping May Benefit.

Ignoring of Japan's ultimatum to Germany is a death sentence for the little garrison of 4000 men at Kiau-Chau if resistance is made, declare German and Japanese residents of Portland. Japanese interviewed last night believe the city will not withstand a week's siege. The German belief is that it will make a more stubborn resist-ance, though no aid can be expected from the Fatherland.

One result of the virtual declaration of war is that the Pacific now will be patroled by Japanese warships to assure uninterrupted commerce from American ports, says Y. Nakaya, sec-retary and manager of one of the larg-est Japanese business houses in Port-

"We did not expect war, for such a stand is so ineffectual for Germany," said Mr. Nakaya last night. "I do not think they can make a stand longer than a week.

Forts Not Strong.

"The situation is different from that of Port Arthur, and a determined re-sistance cannot last so long. The fortications of Kiau-Chau are not so strong fications of Kiau-Chau are not so strong as those at Port Arthur, and there is no adequate communication with the mainland. With but 5000 people there and with communication with the land cut off, there is little chance for the Germans to hold out.

"Commerce will benefit, though. Trade from the American to the Oriental coast will be safer and better, for Japanese battleships will now patrol the Pacific and there will be no danger to com-merce from scouting German cruisers." That it was not to be expected that Germany would accede to Japan's ulti-matum is the opinion of Dr. F. H. Dammasch, head of the German-speak-ing societies of Oregon, who sees trouble for the United States in the present situation.

American Plight Feared, "It was to be expected," Dr. Dam-masch said last evening, "but I cannot see how it will alter the European situation. And I believe it will hasten the day when we shall be compelled to get into the war.

get into the war.

"Kiau-Chau is a forlorn hope. It is almost silly to think that a first-class nation would declare war on a garrison of less than 4000 fighting men. There is absolutely no hope that Kiau-Chau may receive aid from the fatherland. The men will defend it as long as they

JAPAN WARS ON GERMANY

(Continued From First Page.) has made it clear that she will not make peace until Germany is ousted from China.

In short, Germany must go from the Far East. That is the determination of Japan. It will not agree to any peace which contemplates German retention of Klau-Chau.

This attitude has the emphatic approval of Great Britain. Necessarily it is concurred in by Russia and France. So far as the United States is con-cerned, it merely takes note of the conditions which exist and will issue a formal proclamation of neutrality, similar to that issued in the war in progress in Europe.

Japan's participation in the conflict means of course that the enemies of her ally will be her enemies, and the friends of her ally will be her friends. That is to say two of the great naval powers of the world are fighting shoulder to shoulder in alliance, with two of the greatest land powers, Russia and France, to say powers, Russia and France, to say nothing of Servia and Montenegro. It follows also as a matter of course that Germany's enemies are those of Austria as well. But Austria has only a few ships at Kiau-Chau, and there can be no real conflict between her and Japan will not have to call on anything but her regular army to use in this war against Germany. This army comprises 600,000 combatants, of comprises 509,000 combatants, of whom one-twelfth only will be employed against Kiau-Chau. The Japanese navy will be used in scouring the Pacific and destroying German ships. The Idzumo, an armored cruiser of 9800 tons and carrying four eightinch and 14 six-inch guns, has left San Francisco in search of the inferior German cruiser. The latter will seek refuge in all probability in a Pacifo Coast or Honolulu port.

The land defenses of Tsing-Tao have been greatly strengthened by guns taken from an Austrian cruiser which is in Klau-Chau. The German garrison is said to number 10,000 men, and it is estimated that it will require a force of 60,000 men and two months' time to capture the port and the concession.

Japan's determination to take part in the hostilities is commented on unfavorably here and, despite assurances to the contrary, Chinese opinion is general that territorial aggrandizement is Japan's object.

The curious expression that the 'Japanese government believes it to be its duty to give advice to the Imperial German government, to withdraw from Kiau-Chau, is ment' to withdraw from Kiau-Chau, is borrowed almost textually from the 1895 ultimatum, which may be described as advice given to Japan to renounce

"Japan has given a definite understanding, not only that the sovereign right of China over the territory leased by her to Germany shall be cuttailed, but that the territory itself eventually shall be restored to her. Thanks also to the Anglo-Japanese alliance, Japan is ready to confine her operations to a limited area within the China Seas. Count Okuma has pledged Japan to take no action which could give third parties uneasiness.

"All Japan wants is to eliminate from China the root of German influence and I am perfectly well aware that any action which would estrange public opinion in the United States or the Dominions is incompatible with the Anglo-Japanese alliance, which was especially revised only three years ago so as to exclude such possibilities, and positive assurances have been given all neutral powers having possessions in the Far East.

"Japan, no doubt, wishes to regain her seat in the council of the powers when the war ends, and also to increase her prestige with China. But as far the people of Japan are concerned, it is memories of past injuries rather than dreams of future ambitions which at present fill their minds."
