Dr. C. J. Smith, Democratic candidate Governor, who in advocacy of his candidacy pledges himself to give an administration of rigid economy, has a record in Oregon's capital of amazing prodigality with the people's money.

His promise to wield the veto ax as His promise to wield the veto ax as often, and with the economical force with which he credits Governor Chamberlain, does not harmonize with his record found in the Senate Journals. He voted for 15 of the 24 appropriation measures stamped with the seal of executive disapproval. He voted against four and was absent when the vote was taken on four.

Logrolling, which Dr. Smith as a candidate for Governor condemns, ran riot in connection with the normal-school appropriation bills and other normal school bills in the session of 1909. The very existence of the four schools was while imperiled, and three of them sought large appropriations.

Smith, as State Senator from Umatilla County, was interested in the school at Weston. The battle for the appropriations and finally for the existence of the institutions' was stubstence of the south of the four other appropriation measures were penly charged. It was charged there was an organization of legislators working tooth and nall for the "grab."

As a Senstor, the record reveals, Dr. As a Senator, the record reveals, Dr. Smith gave his vote freely to measures appropriating large sums of money which were fathered by his friends. Many of the bills, of course, were meritorious and should have been passed, but the frequency with which the journals record Dr. Smith "aye" votes in connection with appropriation. connection with appropriation measres does not harmonize with his ledges, as candidate for Governor, that give an economical administration and work overtime his veto guil-
