GRAPHIC TALE TOLD OF LINER'S SINKING

North German Lloyd Trans-Atlantic Craft, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, Falls Short in Shots When Met Off African Coast.

LONDON, Aug. 29, 2:30 P. M.—The Evening News publishes a dispatch from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, giving an account of the sinking of the North German Lloyd transatlantic liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse off the coast of Africa by the British cruiser High Flyer, reported Thursday.

Lieutenant Deane, a British army officer, taken prisoner by the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse from the British steamer Galician on the high seas, is authority of the Las Palmas correspondent, and in an interview he gives a graphic account of how the great liner was destroyed.

Lieutenant Deane was not on board the German liner; he had been sent over to the collier Arucal, from which the liner was coaling. When it was seen that the Kaiser Wilhelm was doomed, the German captain sent his sword, his dispatch box and a letter to his wife to the collier, his secretary being his messenger. Before doing this the captain of the liner had announced that he himself would blow up his command rather than surrender.

Cannonade Lasts 40 Minutes. When the High Flyer opened fire on the liner, Lieutenant Deane continued the collier was still fastened to her by one hawser, and owing to some delay, certain prisoners on board the liner did not get a chance to leave the ship.

The Kaiser Wilhelm was bow on to the High Flyer, and the British cruiser had some difficulty in finding her mark. She maneuvered to get broadside on and the ensuing cannonade lasted for 40 minutes. All the shots from the Kaiser Wilhelm appeared to be falling short. From the collier it was seen that she had been hit three times, and on catching fire she ceased replying to the shots from the British cruiser.

When the liner had been silenced, the High Flyer also stopped firing. By this time the Arucal, which had separated from the liner, had got too far away to perceive anything more than that she was still burning. The Germans kept on board the Kaiser Wilhelm only her officers, her gun crew and a few engineers. The remainder of her men were transferred to the collier.

Three British Crews on Arucal. The collier Arucal brought also the crews of three British vessels, the Kaiser, the Nyanga, steamers of 4741 and 1467 tons respectively, and a fishing boat, which were transferred off Rio de Ora, from the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which had sunk these vessels before she was attacked by the High Flyer.

It was 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon while the Kaiser Wilhelm was coaling that the High Flyer was sighted. The liner attempted to flee, but was pursued by the British ship and a running fight developed as the two boats exchanged shots. The High Flyer also disabled with a shot the collier Magdeburg, which was assisting the Arucal in coaling.

The Arucal took advantage of the opportunity to make her escape before the result of the engagement was definitely settled and made her way to Las Palmas.

According to the captain of the fishing boat which was taken by the Kaiser Wilhelm his vessel was captured off Iceland three weeks ago.

Ninety German prisoners from the Maine have been landed at Leith. Eight of them are officers and one is said to be the son of Admiral Von Tirpitz, the German Minister of the Navy. Sixteen of the prisoners are suffering from wounds.

Light Cruiser Engages Four. The British light cruiser Fearless took a prominent part in the battle, she approached within ten miles of the German coast and drew out the German cruisers, which attempted to surround her. At one moment she was engaged single handed against four of them. One had come within 7000 yards when she was struck and burst into flames.

After the gunners had found the range the German marksmanship was good. The Fearless' wireless was shot away and was hit 19 times. Afterwards the Fearless stood by the disabled German, although she herself was in great danger of being sunk. The arrival of the other British cruisers speedily decided the engagement.

SOCIAL PLANS FIXED

Society in Washington Remains Neutral.

DIPLOMATIC CIRCLE BIG

Entertainments in Capital City Not to Be Disturbed by War in Europe—Sympathy for King Albert of Belgium Known.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—With the return of M. Jusserand, French Ambassador and dean of the diplomatic corps, and the early re-establishment of all embassies and legations in their Washington chanceries, the capital is taking on a social neutrality that speaks well for the long training men and women of Washington have had in matters of official etiquette.

The greatest of all neutral powers as represented by its capital city is prepared to extend the same courtesy and consideration to the followers of the Kaiser or of the Emperor of Austria as to the allies of King George, the Czar and the French republic.

Washington society is sincere in its attitude toward the diplomatic circle, and the coming season need not be marred by any lack of tact or courtesy on the part of American hosts and hostesses who will welcome, not at the same time, but with the same sincerity, representatives of all the warring nations. The strong personal friendships of the Ambassador from Germany and his American-born wife will make the Kaiser's Embassy in the future, as American Woman Popular. The new white palace of the Czar's envoy has as its chateleine not only an American, but a Washingtonian of the most charming type, who is one of the most popular women in resident as in official circles.

Without doing the least violence to the President's good counsel, or the newly established social neutrality, as set forth in his message "to my fellow countrymen," Washington may feel a personal sorrow for the stress and trial now besetting Belgium and the city of Brussels. Only a little more than 15 years ago the present King of the Belgians, as Prince Albert, heir apparent to the throne, passed nearly a week in Washington.

Not even the visit of the late King Edward of England when Prince of Wales, and a guest at the White House, was marked with so much ceremony and fraught with such widespread interest as this visit of the Belgian royalty, then a handsome young bachelor, attended by a suite of officers from the court of his uncle, King Leopold. He was guest of the Alibi Club at a notable dinner following the reception given in the Prince's honor by the Belgian Minister.

King at Informal Repast. In the old assembly room of the most exclusive and smallest club Washington has ever known the present King sat and smoked a pipe and drank his beer from a pewter fagon while four members of the club, two of them United States Senators in caps and aprons, prepared the supper of buckwheat cakes, grilled bones and panned oysters that furnished the old-time Alibi menu. Supper was served as usual in the Dutch kitchen, with the appointments in sharp contrast to the earlier dinners in the visitor's honor with the President, the Vice-President and the Minister from Belgium, as the respective hosts.

NAMUR STORMED IN FOG

SCREENING OF GERMAN ADVANCE CAUSED FOG, SAYS BELGIAN.

Survivor Tells of Escape After Hand-to-Hand Struggle With Guns Poured Shells Into Forts.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—A dispatch to the Telegraph from Folkstone says that several Belgian cyclist soldiers who have arrived there from Namur say that the fall of that city was mainly due to the presence of a heavy fog.

Under cover of which the Germans attacked. One of the soldiers, who wore remnants of a uniform of the Thirtieth Regiment, said:

"When the fog became very thick, enveloping all the forts of the town, the Germans began moving up under cover of a terrific bombardment which continued two days without cessation. The enemy had sighted their guns before the fog came on and their aim was excellent. One of the first things hit was our wireless station.

The noise of the cannonading was horrible and Namur soon became untenable, as it was practically demolished.

"We made a dash out and suddenly ran into a body of Germans whom we engaged hand to hand. We dispersed them, although there were only 60 in our little band, but in the fight we lost our bearings and groped blindly through fog and smoke for a long time before we found our way.

"Meanwhile there was a continual boom of heavy artillery and the whistle of shells overhead. Gradually, however, the sound of the bombardment grew fainter and at dawn it had practically ceased.

"The fog then lifted, and from the hills we could see the ruins of the town from whence we came. We pushed on, soon finding ourselves in France."

Wilson Takes Auto Ride and Naps at "Summer White House."

WINDSOR, Vt., Aug. 29.—President Wilson got a thorough rest today at the "Summer White House." A long automobile ride in the morning and a nap in the afternoon completed the day's programme, and he planned to remain indoors tonight.

The President sped in the White-House automobile to the clubhouse at Hanover, N. H., where he passed an idle half hour in the doorway looking out at the rain.

German Cruiser Believed to Be Headed for the Orient.

SEATTLE, Aug. 29.—The German cruiser Leipsig has not been seen for nearly two weeks, and in British Columbia the impression is growing that she is crossing the Pacific Ocean.

She was last sighted off Cape Mendocino, California. Shipping men say that as the Leipsig has no coaling facilities on the Pacific Coast she could not continue the cruise.

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR RAID OF GERMAN CAVALRY.

Uhlans, Who May Be Vanguard of Large Force, Reported Within 30 Miles of City on Channel.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—A Central News dispatch says that Boulogne has been evacuated by the allied troops.

The correspondent of the Express at Boulogne telegraphs that preparations are being made there in expectation of a cavalry raid on the town. He says: "The German troops are advancing in North France and Boulogne is making preparations for a cavalry raid. A notice was posted in the sub-prefecture and the headquarters of the gendarmes, saying the troops had been withdrawn and calling on the inhabitants to remain calm, preserve order and make any sacrifices necessary for the good of their country."

"I am told the customs officials left Boulogne Friday morning, and that the officials of the civil administration are ready to leave. Since Thursday night the town has been absolutely deserted by visitors. Some left by boat and others by land in the direction of Havre and Dieppe. Some of the inhabitants are leaving, but as yet there has been no general exodus.

"The story is that Uhlans, who may be the vanguard of a large body of cavalry, are within 30 miles of the town."
