PATROLS FILL NEED

Organized Work Controls Fires During Long Drought.

READINESS IS GREAT AID

System Now in Vogue, Aided by Government and Timber Owners, Affords Ample Protection in Even Unexpected Weather.

BY C. S. CHAPMAN.

The season of 1914 proved nothing more conclusively than that even during the most unfavorable years loss of timber through forest fires can be practically eliminated if adequate patrols are maintained. During the past three favorable years the Federal Government, state and private owners have been perfecting their patrol organizations, installing lines of communication and generally making it as certain as possible, not only that fires will be promptly detected, but that they can be speedily attacked after they have become started.

The 1914 season therefore found all the agencies far better prepared to meet conditions than at any previous time in the history of the state. With a light snowfall the preceding winter, it was known that unless rains were frequent during the summer months the woods would dry out early and a long, dangerous fire season result. The unprecedented period of drought, lasting 74 days, however, resulted in a far more dangerous year than there was reason to expect.

When, however, the dry spell was broken by the general rain which started on September 8 and the protection agencies took stock of losses, it was found that very little green timber had been lost. A detailed statement of damage resulting from fires will not be available for some time, but it is absolutely known that the loss has been negligible. As is generally the case, there was some loss of logging equipment as a result of slashing fires, but even such losses were little, if any, greater than normal.

Rain Not Total Protection.

It is generally considered that on September 8 the danger of further damaging fires becoming started ended. A large part of the patrol force on duty was accordingly consequently taken off. Since, however, the protective value of the first rains could only extend over a period of about ten days, in the absence of further precipitation it is still possible for fires to become started, and even now care should be exercised in burning to clear land and for other purposes.

The nominal patrol force in Oregon on lands outside the National forests is about 300 wardens. This year, on account of extreme dryness, over 400 were employed by the state, private owners and the Federal Government through the Weeks law appropriation. By far the bulk of the number of fires which occurred during the year and which filled the country with smoke were caught in their incipency by the patrol force and speedily extinguished.

Fires Confined to Old Burns.

The larger fires were almost without exception in old burns or slashings, where it was often impossible to stop them until they had covered considerable acreage. They were, however, prevented from reaching the green timber, and so did no appreciable damage. The season makes it possible to draw numerous interesting conclusions with relation to forest protection. None of these can be more certain than that the state's action in putting on its statute books a model forest fire law and appropriating funds to enforce it has proven an excellent investment.

There are thousands of people in Oregon whose savings are in timber lands. In the past, on account of the danger of forest fires, investments in timber have not been considered to be without a certain amount of risk. If, however, the driest year of record can be passed through practically without loss, it is very conclusive evidence that well-organized patrol constitutes very satisfactory insurance.

SHARKS FRIGHTEN BATHERS

Shelter Island Sound Alive With Big Fellows.

SAG HARBOR, I. I., Sept. 5.—Several days the waters of Shelter Island Sound in the channelway between Long wharf and North Haven bridge have been alive with sharks, big fellows six or seven feet long, chasing the schools of young bluefish or snappers showing on the surface. Efforts to take the sharks with hook and line have failed and men with rifles have blazed away at the dorsal fins showing above the water, but without any success.

Timid bathers fear the sharks, but old longshoremen say they have never heard of a case of sharks attacking a person in the water in this locality, especially with fish food so plentiful.

PIONEER PORTLAND WOMAN DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Mrs. Amelia Burckhardt, widow of Adolph Burckhardt, who died last Thursday, was an old resident of Portland. Amelia Logus was born in 1840 in Karlinkle, Germany. With a sister and brother she joined, in 1864, a brother already living in Portland. She married Mr. Burckhardt here.

Mrs. Burckhardt leaves two sons, Charles and Otto Burckhardt, of Portland, and three daughters, Mrs. John Meadorifer and Mrs. George Biber, of San Francisco, and Miss Lena Burckhardt of Portland. Mrs. Burckhardt is also survived by a sister, Mrs. Henrietta Wentz, of this city.

SMITH TALK GULLED

Republicans Call Candidate "Dispenser of Remarks."

BOURBON EDITOR WONDERS

Valley Newspaper Man Says gubernatorial Aspirant Belongs to "Ask-Murphy" Type — Past Record Is Recalled.

The following statement comes from the press bureau of the Oregon Republican state central committee:

"Speaking of 'corkeed candidates,' a recent interesting issue of one of the Valley papers gives a copy of a letter from the editor, addressed to Dr. Smith, the Democratic candidate for Governor, in which he asks him to set forth his position on the $1500 exemption measure that is to appear on the ballot in the coming election. Dr. Smith's clear and specific response is characteristic. It reads:

"Portland, Aug. 28. Dear Sir: In acknowledgment of your valued favor of the 21st, I have to advise that if you will refer your subscribers to my Portland address, I shall be glad to take up with them the matters in which they are interested. Very truly yours, C. J. SMITH."

"This response should have satisfied any reasonable man, but the editor says it reminds him of the New York City candidate who, when asked to state his position on a certain measure, responded 'Ask Murphy.' He characterizes Dr. Smith as a 'dispenser of remarks' who 'leaves large things to be desired,' and declares that 'as West's hair is supposed to stand for something, but he has shrunk in the wash so that even the Governor doesn't seem to recognize him.'"

Slap From Own Side.

"These are harsh, but suggestive, remarks, coming as they do from a newspaper with Democratic predilections.

"This editor, however, is but following in the footsteps of Democrats over all the state. Active Democrats everywhere are offering to trade Smith for Chamberlain votes. They are making a last desperate stand for 'non-partisan' George. Anyone who undertakes to deny this charge will be confronted with a troop of witnesses. Senator Chamberlain cannot be saved by such tactics. Every intelligent Republican in the state knows that Smith is already hopelessly beaten, and that along that line the Democratic party has nothing to trade. The recent attempt of the Jackson Club to force Chamberlain to leave Washington and come home shows how desperate is the Chamberlain's situation. Mr. Chamberlain's record, however, will be considered later in the campaign.

Smith's Record Dug Up.

"Dr. Smith in his role of 'dispenser of remarks' has laid special stress on the importance of curbing public extravagance. This has led to an examination of his record as a legislator. That record gives him his undisputed title of a 'dispenser of remarks.' His record as a legislator published in a recent issue of The Oregonian shows that while a State Senator he voted for 181 bills appropriating money from the state treasury; that he voted against only 18 bills appropriating money, that he voted for 14 bills that were vetoed

186 WIDOWS PAID

$31,372 in Pensions Disbursed in 14 Months.

356 CHILDREN ARE AIDED

Multnomah County Residents on Roll Number 128, Says Report. Separation From Juvenile Court Is Urged.

That $31,372 has been disbursed in widows' pensions during the 14 months that the law has been in effect in this county is disclosed in the report for the full period, just compiled by Peter McIntosh, chief probation officer of the widows' pension department of the Juvenile Court.

During that time the expense of administration has amounted to about $100 a month, and although the budget provides $50,000 for widows' pensions, it is expected that $15,000 of this amount will not be used.

CORVALLIS TEAM IS DINED

Men Who Won Trophies at St. Johns Tournament Honored.

CORVALLIS, Or., Sept. 12.—(Special.)—The members of the Corvallis volunteer fire department, were banqueted Thursday night by the City Council in honor of the victories won by the department at the firemen's tournament at St. Johns on Labor day. At that time the Corvallis department won the Nott-Joslyn and other trophies and cash premiums aggregating approximately $200.

While the banquet tendered was partly in honor of the tournament victories, the underlying reason for the banquet is the high state of efficiency to which the department has attained and the Council's desire to show its appreciation. Councilman W. T. Johnson was toastmaster of the occasion.

Honor guests at the banquet were A. C. Long, dealer in fire apparatus, of Portland, and Battalion Chief Holden, of the Portland fire department.

The old-fashioned woman who used to pick splinters off the fence to kindle her kitchen fire now has a daughter too refined to manhandle her own hands.
