WAR CHANGES GAY PAREE IN TWINKLING

Daily Daybreak Tramp of Soldier Sound Never to Be Forgotten Now.

ALL FRANCE KEEPS PLEDGE

Boulevards Descried, Cafes Closed, Hotels Shuttered, Patrols of Civil Garde in Massed Formation Scenes Enacted in Hours.

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

On Friday night, July 31, the Grand Boulevard of Paris were alive with people, motors, voitures, singing, danc-ing; each cafe was thronged by the gayest light hearts in the world.

On Saturday night, the boulevards were thronged with growling, ominous, surging crowds with faces like those in the Commune, speaking strong words for and against war. On Sunday night mobs fore down Shuttered. Patrols of the Civil Garde in massed formation. France was keeping her pledge to high civilization. On Tuesday night circulars were pasted on buildings, warning all that France was in danger and appealing by that token to all male citizens to guard the women and the weak. At daylight only was the dead silence broken. France was marching to war at that hour. Will anyone who was here forget the daily daybreak trampi that measured march of the thousands soing to the front? Cavalry, with the sun striking the helmets; infantry with their scarlet overcoats too large; avi-ators with their boxed machines, the stormy petrels of modern war and the dogs, veritably the dogs of war, going on the humanest mission of all to search the wounded in the woods of battle.

And side by side with the marching millions on the pavement, were the women who belonged to them, the women who were to stay behind.

Industry stopped as though a stupen-dous clock in the planetary system had struck six. Money was withdrawn from Maresn struck six. Money was withdrawn from the world, leaving it in the condition of the stone new Nothing had any financial value. A million dollars couldn't buy a loaf of bread. Men lost their nerve, women fainted. Peo-ple went around in circles as do those who are lost on the Australian veldt, loaing their crash on divertion and chine guns that are trained to fire at an enemy's balloon. It is an answer to the prayer of the people that these guns have not been used, but the artil-lery expert, has not the wish that those guns could be tried without dam-age to Paris? What a battle, he thinks. The roar of artillery too high for the sight of man, a test of fiction, a trial of man's invention. That was a stirring day when Paris sang 'God Save the King.' General French arrived from London, coming quietly to confer with M. Viviani, the Minister of War and President Poln-care. He was the first British Gen-eral to come to the aid of France since Cromwell commissioned the Eng-lish Ambassador to go to the assist-ance of Anne of Austria. And the French heart responded as only it can; the people stood in contarbale rooms French heart responded as only it can: the people stood in quadruple rows wherever he passed, and all hats were raised as English. French and foreign volces sang a benediction to Britain's King, History was made there.

WAR PICTURES TODAY. Four full pages of the latest action pictures of the European war are published in The Oregonian to-day. They will be found on pages 2, 8, 4 and 5 of section five. Many other features of particular interest because of the present conflict are printed in the magazine section of today's issue of The Oregonian.

That same night he dined at the Ritz, among a few friends. Even the news-papers seemed not to know it, and so those of us who had the good chance to be there, enjoyed him at leisure. He wore his field uniform of khaki, In the Commune, speaking strong words for and against war. On Sunday night mobs tore down signs, broke windows, shouted the "Marselllaise," wreaked their venge-ance on those who belonged to a nation that France thought had plunged their country into ghastly war. Allens sought shelter; hotels closed their mas-sive doors intended for defense. Mount-ed troops corralled the mobs as cowboys round up belligerent cattle. Detached groups smashed and mishandled things that came their way. France Keeps Pledge. On Monday night came a calm so in-tense that one felt frightened. Boulet France's sake.

Food Question Viewed. First we were afraid we would not have enough to eat. A famine was prophesied and the credulous, who know nothing of the vast sources which supply France with food, clamored to get to England. There were frenzied stories of hotels closing and prices soaring, none of which happened or had any chance of happening. Food was never better and today we have fruit that melts in the mouth: fish souring, none of which happened or had any chance of happening. Food was never better and today we have fruit that melts in the mouth; fish that swims in that sauce, the lack of which Talleyrand deplored in England. which Talleyrand deplored in England; little green string beans that no other country produces or knows how to cook. Prices never rose for the fraction of a sou. If one had credit at a hotel.

all was well, but unless one had ready money in small notes, none of the restaurants would accept an order. Here, and here only, was the snag concerning food. It is true that women went for 24 hours without food, but the reason was a lack of smalli change, not of estables.

Never throughout the centuries to come, whether the map of Europe is changed or not, should the stranger in her gates forget the courtesy of Paris. "French politeness," and "Britannia rules the sea," are the two motioes that came true this summer.

that came true this summer. Signs in Sky Interesting. The mysticism that rests subcon-clously in our depths, has had full play this month of August. The world war, the death of the Pope, the eclipse of the sun which darkened Europe on the day of the great battle, the strange signs in the skies all coming together had an immense effect on the mystic Mind. There were many who believed powerful searchlights backed up by artillery that guard the city by night from the monster of the air. This is a fiction come true. You, in your safe, tranquil homes, cannot know the pleasure it gives to look from the window in the wakeful nights and watch those wheeling comets circling, circling to catch the Zep-elin that might come. And behind the light is the gun. Roof-top artillery! The new war-fare! On the roof of the fashionable Automobile Club on the Place de la Concorde, the little blue firing guns wheel with the blazing fingers, always ready to send shot and shell into the bulging speck in the sky that knows not how to return the luminous sig-ice imploring victory for Austrian arms, on the grounds that the war is contrary to the sentiment of the people of the city.
