

KEEP ROOSEVELT GOVERN, SAYS WOOD

Speaker Thinks Chamberlain Used Strong Influence to Get President's Letter.

COOLNESS IS DETECTED

Senator's Record Again Reviewed, While Hanley's Promises to Back Administration on All Points Contrasted.

President Wilson's recent indorsement of Senator Chamberlain was a matter of political expediency and not prompted by any great admiration for or sense of obligation to Senator Chamberlain, declared Colonel C. E. S. Wood, in speaking before a large audience in Macabee hall at Linnton last night.

Colonel Wood expressed no doubt of the President's sincerity in writing a letter expressing the wish that Senator Chamberlain would be re-elected, but he held up to striking contrast the warmth and the note of appeal contained in the document asking the people of Indiana to support Senator Shively, who is up for re-election in that state.

"The fact that the President's letter was sent to Senator Owen instead of Chamberlain's own colleague, Senator Lane, is very significant," he said. "The Shively letter was sent to his colleague, Senator Kern. Why didn't Chamberlain go to Harry Lane when he needed help? Follette is a man that question might be interesting."

Influences Brought to Bear. He went on to explain the probable steps taken by Senator Chamberlain to induce the President to write the letter. He told of the relations existing between the Senators back in Washington and of the unofficial body known as the "Senatorial Club." He told of the influence wielded by this "club," which really is a kind of a good fellows' organization designed to perpetuate the members in their seats, and of the unwritten rules and regulations that prescribe for newly-created and incorrigible Senators. He related how Senator La Follette first went to Congress from Wisconsin, the other Senators were rude enough to leave their seats and walk out of the Senate chamber whenever Follette would speak merely because La Follette had not submitted to the rules of this Senatorial organization.

"I know this club, as you may call it," said Colonel Wood, "operates on the principle of 'you help me and I'll help you.'"

"So it was that when George Chamberlain needed help he went to Senator Owen, of Oklahoma. Senator Owen went to the President, we suppose, because the President's letter refers to a previous conversation with Senator Owen, and asked him to do something for Chamberlain."

Appeal of Club Pointed. "With the appeal of this club behind Senator Owen's request the President did the only square thing that, as a party man, he could do. He wrote that letter. We all have seen it. We know what it is. In it he says that it is of the utmost importance to the country if the present policies and programme of the Government are to be sustained and continued to maintain a Democratic majority in the Senate. And for this reason the President said he wants Chamberlain to be re-elected. That's all he said. And that's all his club has to say."

Colonel Wood devoted the major part of his remarks to an appeal in behalf of William Hanley, Progressive candidate for the seat vacated by Owen, and that if "the policies and programme of the Government" that the President writes about in the letter are to be sustained and continued, they can be sustained and continued just as well with the support of Senator Chamberlain as with the support of Senator Owen.

Chamberlain's Defection Cited. He proceeded then to show that Senator Chamberlain has not always been the ardent supporter of the President in his legislative program. He pointed out that Hanley is emphatically pledged to support President Wilson in every detail of his legislative program and that if "the policies and programme of the Government" that the President writes about in the letter are to be sustained and continued, they can be sustained and continued just as well with the support of Senator Chamberlain as with the support of Senator Owen.

WALTER GIFFARD, AUTO EDITOR OF OREGONIAN, OFF TO FRONT. Call of Duty Finds Ready Response in Heart of Newspaperman When England Needs His Help.

Heading the call of the mother land, Walter Giffard, for three years a member of The Oregonian staff, departed yesterday for the home of his parents at Wootton, Lincolnshire, England, where he will visit for a time before enlisting in the English army, probably as an officer.

Mr. Giffard did not return to England because he had received an official summons from his government. Nor is he a member of a reserve military organization. Mindful of the slogan of Lord Nelson, "England expects every man to do his duty," he went because he believed that his duty to his country demanded that he support her in her hour of need.

Mr. Giffard has had military training in the English "Territorials," an organization which corresponds in general to the National Guard in the United States. He expects to be sent to Europe soon after his enlistment and at the close of the war he proposes to return to Portland to resume his work as automobile editor of The Oregonian, a position he has filled for 18 months.

Mr. Giffard will visit his parents for perhaps a month before enlisting and in this time he will send a series of articles to The Oregonian, descriptive of England and her time of war, giving his observations of the temper of the people, the provisions that have been made for meeting the extraordinary conditions created by the war and whatever else he considers of interest to American readers. He hopes to continue his work as a correspondent for The Oregonian after he joins the English forces on the Continent and, so far as his duties as a soldier will allow him time to write, will tell the story of the great conflict from a soldier's standpoint.

ENLARGED (Varicose) VEINS

are more painful than dangerous and in their beginning may often be cured or relieved without an operation by wearing a properly fitted elastic stocking.

Ten years ago we began the manufacture of these garments, bringing skilled weavers to Portland—the first in the Northwest. We measure and fit each individual case and warrant satisfaction. Remember, a stocking, belt or bandage is worse than useless if the pressure is uneven—greater in one place than another. The sufferer might as well put so many rubber bands about the affected limb.

Nothing so quickly relieves an old strain, sprain or weak joint as one of our Elastic Garments.

OUR PRICES ARE NO HIGHER than for cheap, factory-made stock. Ours is a true Oregon industry. It is worthy of patronage and support—not from sentimental considerations, but because of real worth.

WIDOW SHOOT HERSELF HUSBAND DIES AND GOLDENDALE WOMAN WOULD DIE, TOO. Mrs. Dollie Stump Places Gun to Breast and Springs Trigger With Foot. Wound May Cause Death.

GOLDENDALE, Wash., Oct. 3.—(Special.)—Mrs. Dollie Stump, distracted by grief, attempted to kill herself today with a .22-caliber rifle. She placed the muzzle of the weapon to her breast and sprung the trigger with her foot. The bullet entered her body just over the heart, inflicting a wound that physicians say probably will be fatal.

The woman's husband, Jess Stump, accidentally shot himself September 23 while in charge of a band of sheep belonging to Uriah Trumbo, grazing in the Slocum Mountains 13 miles from Goldendale. He died yesterday. Stump was bending over to get a drink of water out of a stream, when a revolver, that he was carrying, became dislodged from a holster and fell to the ground, striking a rock. The concussion caused the weapon to explode. The bullet struck Stump in the abdomen and lodged in his back. After the accident, Stump walked nearly two miles to camp.

Stump worked with cattle and sheep, being accompanied most of the time by his wife, who is an expert horsewoman. The couple were very devoted. Mrs. Stump is said to have threatened to take her own life in the event of the death of her husband after the accident happened, and efforts were made by relatives to prevent the deed.

Mr. Fred H. Seibert, 976 S. Oakwood Ave., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "It was while reading several of your endorsements in the Enquirer this morning that I wondered if the traveling salesman realized the great benefit of your grand tonic, Peruna. I have noticed in traveling that every section of the country will affect your health more or less. Catarrh is generally the root of your ill health, still few realize this. If travelers will only use Peruna, they will find no trouble in acclimating themselves. I have used it on two occasions, once when I had a deep cold, and again when I had a dropping in the throat. It works like a charm. No words can explain its great power. Hereafter, in traveling, Peruna will be my dearest friend."

People who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

Worried Man writes: "Let me say that my condition puzzles and worries me. In the last year seem to have been growing old rapidly, though only 38. My
