OVERALLS WEARER BARRED

"Speech" Declaring "Entire Energies Are for Man With Overall" Never Spoken, but is Sent Broadcast With Franks.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Oct. 24.—I stand for the man who wears the overall, as in newspapers turning against me and all the "highbrows" turning against me have had one decided effect. They have burned the bridges between me and them, and henceforth and forever my entire energies are devoted without qualification, evasion or exception to the cause of the man with the overalls.

This is an extract from one of Representative A. W. Lafferty's canned speeches, never delivered, but inserted in the Congressional Record under "leave to print." It is one of 50 speeches which the Hon. Charles D. Lumm has printed in the Record, in order that he may send them through the mails, postage free, under his Congressional frank, and by the use of the thousands of copies of this speech and of all other speeches through the mails at the expense of Uncle Sam in promotion of his candidacy for re-election. According to the postoffice of the House of Representatives, Representative Lafferty has mailed 100,000 copies of this speech, under frank, than any other member of Congress, and the postage, had any been charged against him, would have cost him all or more than his Congressional salary.

Man in Overalls Shunned.

"I have neither the support nor the indorsement of any party. For three years anyone feeling that he needed a little leg exercise, especially if he lived in my district, has taken a kick at me. I am for the man in overalls," runs the speech.

But about this "friend of the man in overalls." Does he mingle with the "man in overalls" when he is in Washington during sessions of Congress? He does not. On the contrary, he has kept far from the man in overalls as any man in Congress could. He has lived as far above the man in overalls as money could place him.

When Representative Lafferty first came to Congress he went to the Willard Hotel, not only the highest-priced hotel in the National Capital, but one where prices are notoriously higher than at most of the leading hotels of New York. The man in overalls never stays at the Willard Hotel, and is never seen there outside of the boiler-room in the sub-basement. Few members of the House and few Senators are able to live at the Willard Hotel, and aside from Mr. Lafferty, who has never lived there have been men of wealth, most of them millionaires.

Millionaires' Hotel His Home.

Naturally, men of that class, being able to afford the most exclusive and caring for the society that naturally centers around the leading hotel of a big city, but not caring to maintain a home of their own, naturally select the same hotel that was patronized by Representative Lafferty for three years.

If it is in this hotel that brilliant social functions, dinners, and receptions are held, down the famous "peacock alley" one walks, or an evening, between rows of social leaders, and Senators give their big dinners and society levees, and the man in overalls is not invited to attend, and if he is, he is temporarily stopping at the hotel. In the dining-rooms of this hotel millionaires and society leaders give their dinners, and the man in overalls is not invited to attend, and if he is, he is temporarily stopping at the hotel.

Employees' Entrance for Overall.

Should a man in overalls be admitted at this hotel to see Mr. Lafferty, and should Mr. Lafferty have been dining at the hotel, would he be admitted to the dining-room? He would not. Would he be taken to one of the hotel parlors for conference with the "friend of the man in overalls" who has the price of Mr. Lafferty paid, or would the man in overalls be shown around to the entrance used by employees. But there, under those surroundings, where he passed among handsome-looking women and millionaires of various walks of life, where he had orchestral music with all meals, and everything to contribute to ease and comfort for Mr. Lafferty, those who live during his first three sessions in Congress.

And did he live as does the "man in overalls" He did not. He lived on the fat of the land, and he paid a price for it that would have bankrupted any man in overalls. Think of the "man in overalls" paying $500,000 for an order of celery, 50 cents for an order of consommé, $1 for an order of boiled salmon, or 50 cents for baked beans and pork. Yet those are the prices Mr. Lafferty paid. Or, would the man in overalls now pay 60 cents for a slice of roast beef, 75 cents for string beans, or 70 cents for plain tomato salad? These are the prices Mr. Lafferty, the friend of the man in overalls, paid while he stopped at the Willard Hotel.

He Pays Two Bits for Pie.

He paid 25 cents for a slice of pie, 30 and 40 cents for his ice cream (and Mr. Lafferty is passionately fond of ice cream). He paid 95 cents for sliced peaches, 50 cents for an order of grapes, 50 cents for a cantaloupe and 20 cents for his coffee.

But even the Willard Hotel was not good enough for Representative Lafferty. When the present Congress convened, he deserted his elegant quarters at the Willard Hotel, and moved to an exclusive Army and Navy Club, and there he has made his abode during the recent session, or through so much of it as he is in Washington. And there, amidst the pomp and grandeur that no other club in Washington knows, Mr. Lafferty has hitched even further than before from the "man in overalls." At the Army and Navy Club no man in overalls could get to Mr. Lafferty. The man in overalls would never admit a man in overalls even though he sought conference with Representative Lafferty, associate member of the Army and Navy Club, the Army and Navy Club is the last place in the city where the man in overalls can penetrate.

Club Is Most Snobbish.

And why not? It is Washington's most exclusive club; it is the most snobbish club in the city, and a member of the club is a member of the ber under a rule which confers associate membership upon members of Congress while they are members. But when Mr. Lafferty is retired from Congress he will simultaneously retire from the Army and Navy Club. He was admitted because of his official position, and when he loses his official position he will lose his membership in the Army and Navy Club.

The Willard Hotel, with all its social acety, with all its elaborate equipment, pulled in time on the Congressman from Portland; his tastes had advanced, and he needed something even more exclusive. He longed to mingle with the active members of the Army and Navy Club; he longed to be near the gold braid and brass buttons; the dress uniforms that form the most conspicuous feature of every White House function. He longed for further status into social circles at Washington that could not be gained through residence at a hotel; he wanted to mix with the Army and Navy set—the most difficult social set to penetrate.

Club Further from Overall.

Membership in the Army and Navy Club gave Mr. Lafferty the lever he desired to gain further social prestige, and to afford the most exclusive and caring for the society that naturally centers around the leading hotel of a big city, but not caring to maintain a home of their own, naturally select the same hotel that was patronized by Representative Lafferty for three years.

If it is in this hotel that brilliant social functions, dinners, and receptions are held, down the famous "peacock alley" one walks, or an evening, between rows of social leaders, and Senators give their big dinners and society levees, and the man in overalls is not invited to attend, and if he is, he is temporarily stopping at the hotel. In the dining-rooms of this hotel millionaires and society leaders give their dinners, and the man in overalls is not invited to attend, and if he is, he is temporarily stopping at the hotel.

Real Lafferty Unknown Here.

Portland never knew the real Mr. Lafferty. He never came to Portland; "the friend of the man in overalls" in Washington would be a social lion. The National Capital never saw him in his swellest evening clothes. Solomon, in all his glory, never saw such a man. Mr. Lafferty, who paid in his evening clothes, with gold-braided and gold-epauleted Army and Navy officers at the Army and Navy Club.

HARRIMAN IS HONORED

CLUB TO DEDICATE SONG TO MEMORY OF LATE RAILROAD MAN.

Special Performance of "Mother" Will Be Occasion of Impressive Ceremony—Bands to Aid.

A song written by William H. Brewster and composed by De Caprio, will be dedicated to the memory of the late E. H. Harriman, Wednesday night at the old Heilig Theater, Eleventh and Morrison streets, when the Portland Harriman Club will have full sway at the performance of "Mother," the Jules Eckert Goodman immortal play which will be produced at the Eleventh street playhouse all this week.

The Harriman Club entertainment committee, headed by P. H. Cremer, has made elaborate plans for an evening of entertainment to be sandwiched in between the second and third performance of "Mother," in which Florence Roberts, George Baker's star character woman, will carry the title role. The play will be significant also for the fact that it was written by a Portland playwright, Jules Eckert Goodman.

The Harriman Club Band, assisted by members of the Strippers and Rosarian Band, will play before and after the play and between the second and third acts solos will be sung by O. B. Hughes, tenor. Between the third and fourth acts there will be solos by Mrs. Fred L. Olsen.

The dedication of the song to E. H. Harriman will be an impressive ceremony, and the National Capital never has been taken by those identified with the railroad system which the late railway magnate built up. J. D. Farrell, president of the O-W, R. & N. Company; J. P. O'Brien, vice-president and general manager; W. W. Cotton, president of the National Capital railway; William Spencer, general attorney; William McMath, president passenger agent; President McMath, of the Harriman Club, and other influential business men of the city have reserved boxes.

This entertainment is only a preliminary to a long line of entertainments to be given by the Harriman Club.

WATER PROJECT BLOCKED

Injunction Sought to Prevent Enlarging Canal at Hood River.

HOOD RIVER, Oct. 24.—(Special.)—Work on the proposed irrigation system of the main canal of the irrigation system of the East Fork Irrigation district in this county, which the subcontractors, Andrews & Bode, had planned to begin at once, may be indefinitely delayed. Notice was served this morning on George W. Wilson, attorney for the Oregon Lumber Company, to appear Thursday before Judge Dallas and show cause why a temporary injunction should not be granted to restrain the construction work.

The lumber company, which has pending a suit against the irrigation district relative to water rights on the east fork of Hood River, maintains that its mill plant at Dee, which is electrically driven, the power being generated by the water on the east and middle forks of the Hood River, will be seriously handicapped in case further water is withdrawn from the river.

BROTHER AND SISTER MEET

John H. Clark and Mrs. H. I. Jenks See Each Other After 41 Years.

LINDEN, Idaho, Oct. 24.—(Special.)—John H. Clark, of Emmett, Idaho, and his sister, Mrs. H. Isabel Jenks, of Kendrick, Idaho, met the first time in more than 41 years at the home of Mrs. Jenks' daughter, Mrs. I. B. Cole, at Midvale, Idaho.

The brother and sister crossed the plains with their father, Cornelius Clark, in 1866, traveling in Captain Seaman's train, and with the family of Harris, France, McClure, Scott, Townsend, Bean, Couch and James.

There are a number of the younger members of that company still here, and Mr. Clark and Mrs. Jenks would be glad to receive a letter from the friends of pioneer days.

DAVID KILL, TRAITOR, IS SUICIDE

PROSSER, Wash., Oct. 24.—(Special.)—Coroner Merle Chapman turned today from Trout Lake, in Western Kilkittat, where he went to investigate the supposed murder of David Kill. The coroner found that the man committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a .22-caliber rifle and did not need it necessary to hold an inquest. Kill was about 42 years old, a horse trader by occupation, and formerly lived at Hood River. He leaves a wife and seven children. Despondency over financial affairs is thought to have been the cause of the act.

CHAMBERLAIN SAYS A QUARTETTE OF NEW PIANO BARGAINS

Chamberlain's Methods Ridiculed and Arguments Bared as Foolishly False.

'SUGAR CHEAPER,' ONE PLEA

Writer Exposes War Tax as Subterfuge of Democrats, Shows Aspirant Voting Frequently Against Interests of His Own State.

BY THOMAS M'GUSKER.

It is a cold-blooded fact that for considerable more than a year times have been "hard," and you can count on the fingers of one hand all who have professed to be Republicans under the present Administration. Say what you may, dollars and cents are the language of political patriotism, and any one who preaches to the contrary brands himself a hypocrite or fool.

There are two political parties in Oregon, the dominant part being the Republican, with little more than the petty selfish bickerings we have heretofore divided our forces, and the Democratic party, which has little more than the strength, governs our state, which may also apply to the Nation.

For the first time in a number of years, however, the Republicans are united and will win.

I frankly admit that I never witnessed such a dirty, muddling, contemptible campaign as they are conducting now, and every self-respecting Republican man and woman should resent it. It is not only voting for the entire Republican ticket, but from now until November 3 by working, as they never have before, for an overwhelming Republican majority.

There is no kinder, cleaner man in Oregon than Dr. Withycombe, yet they do not hesitate to endeavor to belittle and besmirch him.

Attack on Mr. Booth Shameful.

There is no man in Oregon whose private life is more clean, whose business integrity is more highly regarded than R. A. Booth, yet they circulate the most contemptible falsehoods about him in an effort to bring upon the minds of those of our citizens who have more recently located in our state and who do not know the man, a false and untrue charge.

They charge C. N. McArthur with being a hydra-headed monster, who, if elected, will swallow the entire Oregon as a fable, and in opposition to some of its principles. But it is nowhere on record that two months ago, when attempting to obtain office under it, surely not from his speeches, as all the world knows, that he charged that Wilson is a great man, and should have him back there because he is in harmony with him, but in a harmony with the Legislature is a dangerous animal.

George Chamberlain in his speech at Astoria, in substance, that free wool gave the woolgrower higher prices for his wool, and that the necessities of life, and notably sugar and clothing, were cheaper.

"Just imagine, if you can, higher wool and cheaper clothing! According to the record, it will show that just the opposite is true. The cost of the manufactured article, all we have to do is to increase the cost of the raw product. I wonder how many believe that?"

War Taken as Excuse.

He tells you that the reason for the war tax is the war in Europe, which shuts off the imports, thereby causing a shortage of goods. He tells you that without the war, no matter how large the imports, these same goods on the Free List would produce no revenue and this money would go to the pockets of the manufacturer, and not to the consumer. As a matter of fact, on July 1, before the war, there was a deficit of $40,000,000, which at the same rate would have amounted to a deficit of $60,000,000, and Congress was discussing a "Deficiency Tax" to take care of it, when the war came along and gave us the "War Revenue."

He says sugar is cheaper, when the consumer—not the politician—knows that it is higher than it has been for some time.

He resorted to a pettifogging trick when discussing Chinese eggs. He asked you to buy a dozen, and to raise the price, or rather that portion of it that raised eggs for the market. The Democratic press said the audience saw the point, and that they were just the same.

He then proceeded to show the citizens of Baker that cheap Chinese eggs benefited the many consumers as against the few producers.

I am going to try the same on a Portland audience.

What if you raise sugar, wool, wheat or lumber stand up. What, none? Still I don't hear any mirthful laughter. No, it is too serious a subject for laughter. The price of sugar, wool, wheat or lumber, is temporarily high, but clothing is no cheaper, and will not be, for the reason that Mr. Chamberlain with a Democratic Government West, and woolgrowers to compete with free wool from abroad. But there was no reduction in the manufactured goods that are imported, hence there is no necessity for the clothing trust in the Eastern states reducing of the price of clothing.

Beet Sugar Imperiled.

There is a small diminishing tariff on sugar, and when in full force will destroy our beet sugar industry, compelling us to depend on imported sugar, and in case of war, as at present, when our industry destroyed, we would be obliged to pay war prices." Then the consumer suffers. No wonder we don't hear any laughter.

The same is true of our wheat and barley growers, and after they have carefully digested the facts, you won't hear much laughter from the farmer.

Lumber, the greatest industry of our state, is struggling for its very life. It is the only industry that has a prospect for Oregon turn backward. Few of our citizens are sufficiently familiar with the transportation business of this country to appreciate the seriousness of this situation.

The westbound freight revenue into western ports must pay for $25,000,000 a year, but notwithstanding this, the carload business eastbound is three times that of the westbound, as there are only about two mule cars westbound for every three loads eastbound, and the rates are so adjusted that the three loads eastbound and the one load westbound must pay for hauling the two empty cars west.

The bulk of the eastbound business is lumber. Destroy this business and the westbound revenue will be raised, the consumer paying the raise, or the railroads will be forced out of business. I wonder if anyone sees a cause for laughter here?

A few days ago a Democratic Senate, mostly Southern, of which Chamberlain is one, attempted to force through a bill providing for the Government issuing $250,000,000 of bonds to relieve the cottongrowers of the

SCHOOLS ALL THRIVE

Yamhill Reports Progress Along Every Line.

FACTOR IN CHILD LIFE AIM

Methods Revolutionized to Meet New Conditions, Especially in Rural Districts, Where Clubs Give Valuable Assistance.

BY HENRY O. MILLER.

McMINNVILLE, Or., Oct. 24.—(Special.)—"The war has not affected local interest in schools and school work," said S. S. Duncan, county school superintendent, "and the benefit cooperation of the many rural school improvement clubs continues with more energy week after week. It is the policy of this office to make the schools of Yamhill County what they ought to be, and the remedy for this is to be found in the character of each boy and girl in the county and in shaping his destiny."

In this work Superintendent Duncan has an able assistant in Ida Mae Smith, county school supervisor, the office which the last Legislature attempted to abolish.

High School is Pride.

"We are also proud of our junior high school here in McMinnville, the first in the state. It includes the seventh, eighth and ninth grades and is conducted on the department plan. For this school we have a new $30,000 building and modern equipment. City Superintendent Duncan has been instrumental in making this a successful venture in modern school methods, if this is the case, the county school improvement clubs are making a great contribution in some larger city we would hear much more about it, but we are modest."

The most encouraging feature in the school conditions in Yamhill County is the increased interest that is being taken by the people, especially in the rural schools. The disposition to make the school the community center is also bringing gratifying results. "Rural School Improvement Clubs" have been organized in many of the districts and the members are doing everything possible to co-operate with the teachers and the school.

A literary programme usually is given at each meeting, sometimes by the pupils and often by the older people. The clubs are also interested in devoted to discussing ways and means of making the school a more potent factor for good in the community. Last year the club at Springbrook, which has a splendid new $5000 building at Springbrook, the club devoted one day to clearing up the school grounds.

Club Beautifies Grounds.

"The club at Hopewell is responsible largely for the fact that the building was raised during the past year, a basement added, new grounds purchased and improved to such an extent that it was given a $20 cash prize for making the most improvement of any district in the county. Springbrook received the $10 second prize. One of our Indian districts was third in improvement."

The club in Fairview, No. 34, gave to the district its beautiful new building, which is the pride of the patrons and the school. From this club we have one of the most active industrial club leaders in the county, Mrs. George Hamblin, whose untiring efforts have done much to make a success of that movement.

"About 25 industrial clubs have been organized in the county, but we find that the fourth best where there is a live 'Rural School Improvement Club' from which to secure the leader and to which they may look for support and counsel."

Parents and Teachers Join.

"Almost every town in the county has its 'Parent-Teachers' Circle,' whose work is identical with that of the 'Rural School Improvement Club.' They are proving quite as effective as the former and school boards are glad to have their assistance and support. A convention of circles and clubs is held each year, reports of conditions and work done are read and the best lecturers are secured to tell of the plans of these organizations in other places. Many of them are affiliated with the

NATIVE SERVANTS SCARCE

Labor Commissioner Will Report That Foreigners Are Preferred.

SALEM, Or., Oct. 24.—(Special.)—That the majority of women employed in domestic work are foreigners, that they are preferred to native-born ones, that the service is improving, and that families with more than three children have difficulty in employing servants is information which will be contained in the biennial report of Labor Commissioner Hoff. The report will say further:

"Domestic science is favored. The average size of a family employing one domestic is three. All help has had school advantages. Women prefer other vocations to that of housework. Domestic help is more difficult to obtain than two years ago. Hours of work range from seven to nine a day. Wages are increasing, and range from $20 to $40 a month.

"Many servants have afternoons off, but some in evenings. Early breakfasts and late dinners are the reasons for much of the dislike for housework. It is possible to begin work at a specified time and quit at a specified time much of the dislike for housework would cease."

COUPLE OBSERVES 53d ANNIVERSARY

LEBANON, Or., Oct. 24.—(Special.)—The 53d anniversary of the marriage of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Connet was celebrated at their home in Lebanon October 23. It was also a celebration of Mr. Connet's 80th birthday. Mr. Connet has been a minister in the Congregational Church for over 45 years and has held important pastorates in the East. He retired 12 years ago and the family came to reside in Lebanon one year ago. Mrs. Connet was born in 1841. Eight children were born to them, six of whom are now living.
