WOMEN SEARCH MAIL EAGERLY FOR WORD FROM HUSBANDS AT WAR

Portland Wives Face Death Many Times as Reports of Engagements Come in From Front, but Drawn Together by Common Sorrow Race Hatreds Are Banished.

Mrs. Paul Reimers and Infant Son, Captain Reimers' Command's German Torpedo Boat.

DEATH, devastation and financial panic are not the only products of war—there is the crop of "war widows," of which Portland has a number. The war widow is the devoted wife who faces the perils of battle by proxy, the little woman who stays at home while her husband fences with death on foreign soil. Yet the war widow is not confined to the soldier's wife, for she whose husband is in the war zone, as yet not called to the front, but expecting hourly summons, is also one of this clan.

There is no room in the heart of a war widow for hatred, even of those who threaten her husband's life. Those who have remained behind in Portland feel no animosity toward each other. Though race may differ, their hearts are too full of anxiety for those at the front. The tense scanning of newspaper reports of engagements where her husband might be, the anxious expectancy with which she greets the mailman, are too much a part of the war widow's daily life to allow for the harboring of an echo of the jealousies of nations.

As she pursued her housewifely duties several months ago, Mrs. Paul Reimers little thought that in a few days she would be a war widow. But this was to be the case. Her husband, a manufacturer and capitalist of Portland, received a call from the fatherland, in whose service he had been raised to the rank of Captain. He answered and won his way across the Atlantic in disguise on an Italian boat. Evading the search of British authorities at Gibraltar, he made his way to Germany and today is in command of a torpedo-boat of the Kaiser, in the North Sea, reported to have been in several engagements. His headquarters are at Kiel or in Wilhelmshaven. Meanwhile Mrs. Reimers waits for word from him and is cheered by the few notes of well-being that leak through the German censorship. A daughter of 16 years, a boy of 13 and a four-months-old son remain with the mother in Portland.

The former Miss Margaret Montgomery, now Mrs. Rufus Zogbaum, is almost a war widow. Her husband, Lieutenant Rufus Zogbaum, has left her alone in London, but he only has come to the States on business and will return. He has been in charge of the German embassy in London since the Ambassador was recalled. Mrs. Zogbaum was married but last August in London. She has won much fame as a writer and has many friends in Portland.

With her return to her husband in Germany indefinitely postponed by the war, Mrs. Conrad Delbrueck, formerly Miss Ilse Koehler, remains in Portland with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Koehler. Her husband, who is a rich manufacturing chemist of Elberfeld, Germany, has not yet been drafted into army service, according to last word received in Portland, but he is of eligible age and his future selection is not an improbability. Mrs. Delbrueck has been married for three years and last Spring came to Portland for a visit to her parents. She intended to return in September, but war prevented.

ART TREASURE AT ANTWERP

Cathedral Has Famous "Descent From the Cross" by Rubens.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 5.—Antwerp Cathedral's greatest treasure is Rubens' "Descent From the Cross," the famous triptych said to have had its birth in the desire of the painter to avoid a lawsuit. At the command of Albert and Isabella he had consented to make Antwerp his home, and built himself a house which unfortunately trenched on the ground of the Honorable Company Arquebustiers. Rather than pay compensation in money, Rubens offered to paint the plaintiffs a picture of St. Christopher, bearer of Christ and patron saint of the guild. The magnificent work was done and placed in position in the cathedral in 1612. There is a legend that the head and neck of the Virgin having been damaged by riotous students in Rubens' studio, Van Dyck was selected by the culprits to repair the damage, which was done so well that the master forgave the sons of Bellai.
