

SORORITY BAN FOR SCHOOLS ENDORSED

At Meeting of 100 College Fraternity Women No Word of Opposition Is Uttered.

MORAL SUPPORT PLEDGED

Two Organizations Prepare for Action of Pan-Hellenic Association by Eliminating Secrecy—Attitude of Others Not Known.

The Pan-Hellenic Association of Portland, meeting at the residence of F. E. Beach, 539 Chapman street, yesterday unanimously endorsed the ruling of the National Pan-Hellenic Association that members of secret high school sororities must be barred from initiation into college fraternities after today.

About 100 college fraternity women, half of whom formerly have been identified actively with high school sororities, attended.

Every member of the association who expressed an opinion during the general discussion yesterday advocated the enforcement of the ruling. The administration of the ruling, however, will be in the hands of the sororities on the campus at the University of Oregon at Eugene.

There are now seven national sororities at the state university. Gamma Phi Beta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Delta Gamma, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Alpha Phi. Each of these sororities has indicated its attitude toward the National body and will not be allowed to initiate any girl who retains or accepts membership in a high school secret sorority from this time forward.

Only Moral Support Possible. "By the motion passed today we pledge our moral support and our desire to do everything possible to encourage an enforcement of the ruling but we are powerless to go any further in the matter," said Miss Agnes Beach, president of the Portland Association yesterday.

The actual enforcement of the law will have to be carried out by the active chapters at Eugene. The oldest high school societies in Portland, Omega Nu and Delta Iota Chi, will not be affected by the ruling because they have already taken steps which legally make them non-secret, but the members of the other two sororities of National standing, Phi Delta Sigma and Beta Kappa Tau, will have to resign immediately if they wish to be eligible for membership in any national college sorority.

The members of the latter organizations have two alternatives. They may depend for membership on those who never intend to enter college or may await the enactment of probable corrective legislation at their next national convalescence. In anticipation of the college ruling, the Phi Delta Sigma are now in communication with Eastern chapters to ascertain what step is advisable.

Rule Approved Generally. "College women as a rule are quite decidedly in favor of the enactment of the new rule. Almost without exception women who have been affiliated with college sororities agree that the law which will bar members of secret high school orders from college sororities is a step in the right direction.

There is not the least reason for the high school sorority that there is for the college sorority, where housing conditions must be set up. If it were not for the existence of sorority houses at our universities, the public would be compelled to erect many dormitory buildings to take care of the women students. This is the case at the University of Oregon, where girls of congenial temperament are knitted together as in one big family, in the best possible solution. But in the cities the high school girls have their homes to live in, and the fact that so few are privileged to join the sororities makes those who do not gain membership feel badly. This situation creates an unwholesome spirit.

In making the ruling at New York the Pan-Hellenic held that high school sororities were not sufficiently mature to become members of secret organizations which might lead them into channels of snobbishness and extravagance. Many join, it is held, without the knowledge of their parents, who do not favor the system because it is unnecessary.

Younger Girls Object. The younger girls, as a rule, do not look with favor upon the new rule, but they are determined to make the best of things.

There are both advantages and disadvantages to high school sororities," said Miss Marjorie McCollom, a member of the Phi Delta Sigma sorority, last night. "Some say they make girls too old for their age and nourish cliques. As a matter of fact, much good may be realized from the high school sorority as the means of creating many valuable friendships and each sorority is now doing a great deal of charitable work."

Miss McCollom intimated that the members of her sorority were preparing for the enforcement of the new rule. When a girl is invited to join her order, she said, she is warned about the rule. If she doesn't want to run the danger of being proscribed from college sororities she can refuse to join the high school sorority. Girls who now belong can become eligible for college membership in case they resign immediately.

"High school sororities are now a thing of the past, anyhow, and since the colleges have taken such a decided stand against them I do not believe any of the girls will feel badly," said Miss Ruth Blair, a high school girl, who is not a member of any sorority.

UNIVERSITY MEDICAL STUDENTS MAKE UP CREDITS IN Y. M. C. A. COURSE.

Y. M. C. A. Pre-Medical Class at Work in Physics Laboratory. Conditioned students from the medical school of the University of Oregon are making up their deficient credits in the night classes of the Portland Young Men's Christian Association. A special course has been added to the curriculum which has the direct supervision of the faculty of the university. The examinations are conducted by the state instructors and the course required to measure up to the university standards. Several students are enrolled and the class already has become a fixture in the association's educational department. Instruction in the association follows the same lines as that given in the colleges and universities and students who pass the tests have the same rating for the work done as those who go through the regular course. A recent picture shows the class at work in the physics laboratory, a school workroom as well equipped as any in the state.

WAR HITS FLORIST

Imported Bulb Supply Low, Says James Forbes.

AZALEAS CUT OFF, TOO

Belgian Rhododendrons May Not Last Until January 1—Blossoms for Thanksgiving Out-New Chrysanthemum Announced.

The association of flowers and the war seems far fetched, yet it is true, according to James Forbes, a Portland florist, who has helped supply the flower market in Portland for 25 years. "It is much cheaper to import various plants and bulbs than to produce them here," said Mr. Forbes, yesterday. "Tulip and hyacinth bulbs come from Holland, lilies-of-the-valley from Germany, and there is only enough of this popular plant to last until January 1, 1915, azaleas and rhododendrons come from Belgium, so the supply may run out, as we are unable to get any of these plants, on account of the war. Oregon rhododendrons are a beautiful out-door shrub, but will not do for a potted plant."

Thanksgiving Blossoms Are Early. "Owing to the mild weather which has prevailed, flowers are blooming three weeks ahead of time. Thanksgiving blossoms have been ready for a week, but fortunately, are of such a nature that they will last until the Thanksgiving. Flowers never have been more plentiful than they are at present."

"The Harvard chrysanthemum is the latest addition to that variety of popular flower. It is rich crimson and perfect in shape, and is to be seen for the first time, as it was just produced in Boston. The William Turner Society will give a show of Spring flowers at the Armory instead. Killarney Brilliant Is New Rose. "American beauty roses are all imported from California. They have a great name, but we don't get the best of them because the regular customers in California get first choice, and our orders are infrequent. "New roses this year are the Killarney Brilliant, a deep pink Killarney rose, and the Ophelia, a shaded pink and yellow rose, both in the commercial, commercial carnations. The Gorgeous, a carmine color, a new light pink of the Enchantress type, our own production, a deep, full-rounded pink carnation called the Esther, and the striped, or mixed pollen, Venora are the most conspicuous in booths and decorations."

Orchid Supply Now Is Good. "Orchids are always beautiful on account of the delicacy of their color, and, being hard to raise, command high prices. They have been scarce for a month, but now there is a good supply. The lavender catella is the most popular, but there are orchids of every color and various spray varieties, yellow and white, and the lady's slipper species. "It is impossible to produce enough roses or carnations for Christmas day orders, to do so would mean to flood the market at other times. Recently begonias, azaleas and poinsettia plants have taken the place of cut flowers in the holiday season, when the demand for cut flowers cannot be met. The short, dark days in December are not conducive to prolific flower bearing."

"PILLS" IN NUTS FOUND

Negro Woman in Jail Falls to Get Opium and Man Is Arrested. Lena Smith, colored, known familiarly by jail attaches as "Toots," held on the top floor of the Courthouse for 10 days on a vagrancy charge, has an admirer, Francis Morgan, who is more devoted than many a suitors. He sent her a quantity of walnuts, from which the meat had been abstracted and opium substituted. It is charged, after which the two halves of the nuts were carefully glued together. Matron Rogers, of the women's department of the jail, noticed the least suspicion of glue on the twin edges of the walnut halves and investigated. Cooked opium was found inside in globules of proper size to be rolled in cigarettes with tobacco. Morgan was arrested Friday night by Sheriff Word's deputies, Jailers Glenn and Kennedy.

Lecturer Has Grant's Scabbard.

The scabbard of the sword used by General Grant in the Mexican War was exhibited by Rev. C. E. Cline at a lecture on General Grant and other Civil War Generals by Dr. E. O. Eldredge at the Mount Tabor Methodist Church Thursday night. Dr. Cline, who was personally acquainted with General Grant, spoke reminiscently of him. Other lectures of a similar nature will be given during the Winter months.

FAKIRS MUST KEEP OUT

Council Passes Ordinance to Protect Public Market. By unanimous vote the City Council passed an ordinance Friday providing for the exclusion from the public markets of the city of all persons found guilty of buying and reselling. The ordinance provides that a person excluded shall not be permitted on the market again until he or she has made application in writing and the application has been granted by the Council. Upon numerous occasions persons posing in the market as farmers have been found to be fakirs, their business being that of buying produce in the wholesale market or from farmers and selling it on the public market. While these people have been excluded from the market so far, there was a question as to the right of the city to keep them out. The ordinance provides the way.

LUMBERMEN TO GET HELP

Oregon's Delegation Promises Such Federal Aid as Is Needed. Oregon's delegation in Congress promised, at a meeting in the Commercial Club, Thursday night to assist the lumber manufacturers of the North Pacific Coast in the development of their industry. The meeting was attended by about 75 of the leading lumber manufacturers of the state, and by Senators Lane and Chamberlain, Representatives Hawley and Sinnott and Representative-elect McArthur. The present depression in the lumber trade frankly was pointed out to the Congressmen and a mutual desire to
