Fruitgrowers of West Expect Big Market, Not in Europe, but in Middle West Farm Country.

EUGENE, Or., Nov. 14 .- (Special.)-Indications are that next year will b the biggest year for the Oregon fruitgrower in the history of the industry in the Northwest, according to J. O. Holt, manager of the Eugene Fruitgrowers' Association. He has com-pleted a survey of the probable effects of the present war situation upon the fruit industry. "The immediate effect is slight," h says. "The present apple crop is bene-ited little by the war, but the real influence upon the Oregon fruit indus-try will be felt within a month. "I look forward to an era of extreme-ly good prices by December. Buyers ceased taking dried and canned fruits when the war broke out. Now they are ready to come back."

The West's market for fruit next The West's market for fruit next year will not be in war-stricken Europe, according to Mr. Holt. It will be in the Middle West, where the farmers are receiving high prices for their food products. These high prices will give a basis for a market for fruit.

"The price of wheat, and the way in which the war is taking cattle, cornard would is sure to bring money to the and wool is sure to bring money to the farmers in the Middle West," continued Mr. Holt, "The war will require some canned fruit, but the great bulk of our product will be sold in this country The steel industry in the East is flour-ishing, although not much is being said

'The cotton situation in the South hits the apple market in a soft spot, for the South takes many apples. The other parts of the country will make up
