

LOSS OF AUDACIOUS DUE TO SUBMARINE

Berlin Account Says Fact Vessel Was Hit Twice Is Conclusive Proof.

ENEMY DISCOVERS BASE

Raid at Lough Swilly Result of Information Gained Through Spies. Mother Ship Believed to Have Been Lined.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(Special.)—Almost a month after the British dreadnought Audacious was sunk mysteriously off the north Irish coast the authentic story of her destruction has become known—that she was sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine and not by a mine, as formerly believed. Despite all the mystery which the British Admiralty sought to throw around this disaster to one of her newest and greatest ships, the real facts are available for publication.

The news was received here from an authoritative source in Berlin and the details fit closely with the report that came from eye-witnesses of the disaster from the steamship Olympic.

Warship is Hit Twice. The Audacious was hit twice and the second torpedo caused her magazines to explode.

There has been much mystery about the base of the British fleets and last month the Germans through their system of espionage, learned that the British battleship fleet was making its base at Lough Swilly, a harbor on the northwest coast of Ireland, where the water is deep and there is fine protection in all weathers.

When this information was obtained by the German authorities a small squadron of submarines was sent out to try to catch one or more of the big British battleships and at the same time to show how alert the Germans were in having discovered the British base.

Coast of Scotland Skirted. Submarines conveyed by a mother craft left Wilhelmshaven, and, carefully dodging mines, worked its way north and then skirted the coast of Scotland, and on October 26 had discovered the base at Lough Swilly. Early in the morning of October 27 it was blowing a gale and a heavy sea was running. In a measure this was favorable to the submarine, because in a high tumbling sea it would be difficult to see the small periscope when the submarine came to the surface to take sight.

The scene when the tiny vessel of destruction arrived was one to gladden the heart of any commander of a vessel. Spread out before him was a big British fleet of battleships, all new, including the latest turned-out battle cruisers, armored cruisers, scout, torpedo-boat destroyers and many other units that go to make up the fighting machine in command of Admiral Jellicoe.

Torpedo Fired at Close Range. The submarine took one look and then submerged. Again, a little later, it came to the surface and was only a short distance from the Audacious and within striking distance. The German naval authorities believe in a short run for their torpedoes and an exceedingly high explosive. The range of their torpedoes is about 600 yards and the Audacious was not more than a quarter of a mile from the hidden destruction.

How many torpedoes were fired from the submarine is not known. One caught the Audacious stern and exploded, probably damaged that vessel's propellers. It also disabled the after turbine, according to reports from a vessel in the vicinity.

It is probable the men on the Audacious saw the torpedo before it struck. Drednoughts Scatter Immediately.

Before she was struck the Audacious began to steer a zig-zag course, which is the accepted way to try to avoid a torpedo attack.

The submarine dove immediately. At once there was consternation in the fleet. The big vessels, acting on the orders of the British Admiralty, scattered, each looking out for herself. Destroyers and scout cruisers darted hither and thither trying to find the enemy. A wireless was sent to the Olympic warning Captain Haddock of the presence of the enemy's submarines and asking for help.

The Audacious for a time headed in towards the harbor at Lough Swilly, but before she had gone far she was dead in the water and settling stern.

The Olympic came up and tried to tow the disabled battleship, but the steel hawser parted.

When the German commander thought the danger was over he carefully came to the surface again and took another sight to see what had happened.

Second Torpedo Fired. The Audacious was helpless and not far away. The commander of the submarine decided to fire another shot at the dreadnought and it went straight to the mark, caught the battleship amidships and amid ammunition in a magazine to explode and the great vessel was a wreck, slowly settling in the deep.

This time the submarine cleared out altogether and tried to make her way home. Whether she reached her parent ship, which is supposed to have been the Berlin, formerly one of the trans-Atlantic passenger steamships, has not yet been reported. The Berlin, however, has reached Troublen, a town on the coast of Norway, and has been interned there.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Fifty thousand barrels of wheat and flour from Kansas, constituting the first shipment from that state for the relief of Belgian non-combatants, will be ready by December 1, according to a telegram received here today by the American commission for relief in Belgium from ex-Governor Stubbs, head of the Kansas sub-committee on relief work.

In the same message Mr. Stubbs said he hoped to have a second shipment of 50,000 barrels ready soon after the sending of the first.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Another shipment of provisions purchased with American dollars for the hungry people of Belgium was dispatched today on the steamer Jan Block, which sailed from London for Rotterdam. On the ship were 700 tons of wheat, 500 tons of flour, 600 tons of rice and 200 tons of...

erty. Another decree requires the payment of various fees for fishing rights in Lower California.

DIPLOMATS IGNORE CARRANZA. Only General Blanco Remains to Protect Capital.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—The Mexican capital is tonight without a regular police force. The national palace is deserted, save for an occasional attendant guarding halls and doorways.

At the headquarters of General Obregon a council of war was held tonight to decide whether the complete evacuation of the city orders by General Carranza should be complied with. All the Generals, with the exception of General Blanco, attended the conference.

He declared in a signed statement that he would not desert the capital and leave it to the marauding bands of Zapata adherents who occupy the surrounding suburban towns.

As evidence of good faith, General Blanco has ordered his men to take possession of the abandoned police station and has appointed Colonel Samuel Vasquez chief of police, the former chief having abandoned the city and gone to Carranza's headquarters.

The diplomatic corps, after an extended meeting today, broke off all relations with the Carranza government. Every member of the cabinet except Jose Reynoso, minister of finance, has left the city.

He declared he would remain to guard the funds left in his care until he can deliver them to a responsible government.

General Obregon will leave the capital early tomorrow morning. He set free all the political prisoners today, this being his last act as commander-in-chief.

A commission of Zapata forces, it is understood, will come here tomorrow to confer with General Blanco.

SHIPS TO GUARD AMERICANS. Foreigners in Vera Cruz Gather Within Range of Guns.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 21.—When the American troops evacuate Vera Cruz next Monday the majority of the American residents will be quartered in the district about the Consulate, which is only a block away from the waterfront. Their only protection, other than that which the Mexicans have promised, will be the warships commanded by Rear-Admiral McLean, whose flagship now is anchored within the inner harbor. The battleship Texas is just outside the harbor and the gunboat Petrel is within easy call.

All day Americans living in the central hotels and in houses some distance from the waterfront have been engaging rooms where the ships' guns can protect them.

The steamer Antilla, of the Ward line, has been chartered by Brigadier-General Frederick Funston by authority of the War Department and on this ship there will sail such refugees as the United States considers itself under obligation to remove from danger.

The Antilla's list of passengers will include policemen and others who have been employed by the Americans, and priests and nuns.

That General Villa's supporters here will offer armed resistance to the troops of Carranza was regarded less likely here today. Adherents of General Villa admitted that their forces were too weak to be successful.

OBREGON CONCENTRATES ARMY. Carranza General Expects to Defend Capital With 75,000 Men.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 21.—General Obregon's forces are concentrating 20 miles from Mexico City, and by the middle of next week he will have 75,000 mobilized to defend the capital against attack.

This information was contained in a telegram from Obregon to General Hill, Carranza commander in Sonora. Obregon states that he is well equipped for a campaign in the cold regions of Mexico. All available arms and ammunition have been collected by his command.

He said, all of whom have signified their intention of fighting for Carranza as long as he remains in charge of the executive committee of the republic under the plan of Guadalupe.

Joseph Shannon, executive board member, was acquitted.

The jury recommended leniency in the sentencing of "Muckie" because of his youth. Bradley was also an I. W. W. officer.
