RICHARDSON BEST OF TENNIS CRACKS

Ranking Committee Names Mrs. W. I. Northup as Star of Women.

WICKERSHAM IS SECOND

Francis Pratt, Lieutenant Hobson and A. D. Wakeman among First Five. With Misses Fording, Fox, Campbell and Ryder.

Rev. L. K. Richardson and Mrs. W. I. Northup were the best tennis players in Portland in 1914. The report of the ranking committee, composed of Richard Jones, of the Multnomah Club; F. E. Harrigan, of the Irvington Club, and A. B. McAlpin, the third member who was named by Messrs. Jones and Harrigan, was issued last night, as follows:

- Men.
1—Rev. L. K. Richardson.
2—Brandt Wickersham.
3—Francis Pratt.
4—Lieutenant Hobson.
5—A. D. Wakeman.
6—J. F. Ewing.
7—O. P. Morton.
8—P. H. Gill.
- Women.
1—Mrs. W. I. Northup.
2—Stella Fording.
3—Lilly Fox.
4—Irene Campbell.
5—Mabel Ryder.

For several years past Brandt Wickersham has held top place among the state's tennis cracks, but L. K. Richardson displaced him last season, in the opinion of the experts on the committee. One new man in the ratings is M. J. Pratt, who is placed next to Richardson and Wickersham. Pratt formerly teamed with Leslie Murray in the doubles at Stanford University. While Lieutenant Hobson is located across the river at Vancouver Barracks, the committee decided to adhere to past customs and include him in the Oregon tennis rankings. He is placed fourth.

OWLER PUT TO TEST

CORBETT PROTEGE SHOWS SPEED IN SAN FRANCISCO BOUT.

White Hope Green, but Comes Out of Go With Peterson, of Olympic Club, With Flying Colors.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 16.—(Special.)—Jim Corbett's heavyweight white hope, Tom Cowler, can leave San Francisco for the Antipodes with the O.K. stamp as a good prospect. Despite the fact that Cowler had an advantage of some 25 pounds over Rudie Peterson, of the Olympic Club, the Englishman was put to a decidedly severe test this afternoon in the gymnasium of the club. Peterson is a tearing sort of fighter, awkward to hit, and Cowler came away from the three-round bout with flying colors.

Cowler is green, of course, but there are many points in his favor. Taking the milling purely on his merits Cowler would have been returned the victor, for he left a decided mark on Peterson's right eye in the closing round, and further than that had Rudie staggering around the ring with none too clear an idea of what was happening.

The Corbett protege was inclined to take things easily in the first round. Peterson, too, was laying back, according to instructions, but he rallied at the close and surprised Cowler with some stiff lefts to the body and head. In the second round there was little wrestling, but Cowler's right uppercut showed staggering force in the last chapter. The newcomer is remarkably fast on his feet for so big a man and shapes up like a boxer. He is fast with his punches and apparently has a supply of good nature, which usually is a good asset to any fellow who is likely to be stung once in a while. Cowler evidently carries a good punch, although he must needs learn some of the finer points in delivering it with better effect. Peterson covered up a great deal, so Cowler could do little with his left and had to await his opportunities with a right uppercut. On the whole, if Cowler is brought along in easy style, he may have a bright future; and Corbett is the best tutor in the world.
