

CONFESSED GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Jury Trying Louie Hing for Second-Degree Murder Acts in 90 Minutes.

WAR REVIVAL IS FEARED

Witnesses for State Are Guarded and Peace Officials Endeavor to Prevent Tong Outbreak.

After deliberating 90 minutes, a jury in Circuit Judge Davis' court yesterday afternoon found Louie Hing, alleged Hop Sing tong gunman, guilty of manslaughter for the shooting of Lum Foon on the night of March 16, 1913.

The case was completed at 1 o'clock yesterday when Judge Davis finished instructing the jury. The 12 men then went to lunch, returned at 2:30, and at 4 o'clock were back in court with a verdict. Louie Hing had been charged with second-degree murder.

During the trial Louie Hing maintained an attitude of indifference; he seemed to have implicit faith in the ability of his tong brothers to get him out of his difficulty. His only evidence of nervousness was constant drumming on the floor with his feet.

When the verdict was read, Louie Hing, who could not stand English enough to know that he was convicted, thrust his head forward a little, and his heady Oriental eyes gleamed.

The penalty for manslaughter is from 1 to 15 years in the Penitentiary or a fine of not more than $5000 or both. As Louie Hing was indicted for second-degree murder, he must, according to Penitentiary rules, serve at least two years, or double the minimum sentence.

The Hop Sing and the Bow Leong tongs were active in March, 1913. Simultaneously there were outbreaks in Portland, Seattle, Oakland, San Francisco and Stockton, and in each place there was bloodshed according to the evidence. Louie Hing, Huey Tung and Louie Soon entered the store of Lum Foon, a prominent Bow Leong tong man, at 8 o'clock on the night of March 16, 1913.

After the Hop Sing and the Bow Leong tongs were active in March, 1913. Simultaneously there were outbreaks in Portland, Seattle, Oakland, San Francisco and Stockton, and in each place there was bloodshed according to the evidence.

Further examination revealed a bullet wound in the fleshy part of his leg. The wound healed quickly and Louie Hing was arrested by other Chinese members of the Bow Leong and Huey Tung tongs, identified the wounded man as Louie Hing, who was wanted for the murder of Lum Foon.

Louie Hing (for his identification as such) was taken to the hospital and packed in his trial by the resources of the Hop Sing tong. Jay Bowerman and Dan Powers were engaged to defend him.

The conviction of Louie Hing brings the tension in the Chinese quarters of the breaking peace. Trouble simmered close to the surface during the trial. The state's witnesses, chief among whom was Sam Jan, former partner of the man slain, have been kept under guard, and the authorities believe it may be necessary to keep watch over them in the future.

LEGISLATURE WOULD SAVE

Favorable report from the committee of the whole, but was referred back so that the appropriations for the agricultural experiment and college extension work can be continued. The millage taxes for the educational institutions or for the county fair awards are not included in the bill. They will be continued.

However, there is a manifest disposition on the part of some members to repeal all continuing appropriations, including the millage levies for the agricultural college and the university.

It would not be surprising for a bill providing for such repeals to make its appearance in the House before the end of the first 20-day period.

A further manifestation of the intentions to save money was displayed in a comparatively recent way when the House passed the Weeks bill providing amendments to the registration laws that will obviate the necessity of mailing election pamphlets to more than one voter in the same family.

While neither house has accepted the opportunity of saving money by diminishing the number of clerks it is contended that economy in this direction would have been accomplished at the expense of efficiency.

Senator Dimick's bill providing for the abolition of the State Conservation Commission will be up for third reading in the Senate Monday and is expected to meet with considerable opposition.

bill aimed to make effective the prohibition amendment to the constitution adopted by the people last Fall. The report will be favorable to the bill. It will be amended in many particulars, however, but the substance of it is undoubted, will remain as in the original draft.

It is certain, though, that the bill will be fully discussed on the floor of the House, and that it will receive equally active consideration on the floor of the Senate. The manifest disposition of the Legislature is to pass a strict prohibition bill.

The question of a special election in the Fall of 1915 to consider proposed constitutional amendments also is receiving attention, but it is apparent that it will be difficult to pass a measure providing for a special election through this Legislature.

The public lands committee in the Senate will hold an important meeting Monday evening, when it will consider further the State Land Board's proposed lease of Summer and Abert lakes in the southern part of the state.

The fisheries committee in the House still is wrestling with the proposal to eliminate commercial fishing in the Willamette River between the Oregon City Falls and the Oswego bridge.

Three House Bills Through. The House now has received an aggregate of 296 bills, while the Senate has received 88. The Senate has passed three bills, one by Schuchel providing a possible means for Oregon City and West Linn building a joint waterworks system.

The House now has received an aggregate of 296 bills, while the Senate has received 88. The Senate has passed three bills, one by Schuchel providing a possible means for Oregon City and West Linn building a joint waterworks system.

Recess Plan Pending. The Senate has defeated five of its own measures and two House bills. One Senate bill has been withdrawn and one laid on the table.

The House will have 26 House bills and two Senate bills on third reading at the morning session Monday, while the Senate will have three Senate bills.

At 2 o'clock Monday afternoon the Senate will consider the Kellaher joint memorial indorsing the Ferris bill now pending in Congress.

When the guests assembled from the hotel lobby in the dining-room they were confronted by Jack Allison, the conductor of the special train which brought the officials to the city.

Just outside one of the dining-room windows was a large locomotive bell. It was sounded loudly and then Local Agent Nelson at one end of the long festive board, which had been arranged around three sides of the room, started a little electric train, which really ran it went all the way around to the other end, where it reached the "new local roundhouse," where the train was turned around and sent on its return journey.

Throughout the evening the train was used to take messages and greetings to the officials, who sat at the head of the banquet table. Overhead there was a workable telegraph line on reel, honest-to-goodness crossarms with a key at one end and sander at the other.

Two similar cases said to have been decided adversely in Federal and State Courts.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Jan. 23.—(Special.)—Liquor dealers in this city are discouraged and none knows where he stands, but most of them are inclined to believe they would have been better off if they had closed up December 31, when the local option law would have gone into effect had not a restraining order out of a Federal court been procured.

A local brewery petitioned Judge Cummins of the Federal court at Tacoma for a restraining order to prevent the county or city officials here from putting into effect the local option law.

The petition was granted, and the saloons, being mentioned indirectly in the petition, but not a party to the suit, remained open after the first of the year. Sheriff Cresap made a round of the saloons and bought half a pint of whiskey in each one, and then had 17 dealers arrested under instructions from L. M. Burnett, then County Attorney. They were released under $250 bonds each.

A demurrer was argued before Judge Back of the Superior Court. The judge overruled the demurrer, which has been appealed to the Supreme Court.

Meantime, two other cases, similar to that of Vancouver, have been passed upon—one by a Federal judge east of the mountains, and the other by a Superior judge—and both were favorable to the drys. It is felt here that the Supreme Court will sustain the lower court and that the saloonkeepers will be compelled to close in due time.

THE DALLES FETES RAILROAD NEARLY

City Expresses Gratitude to O. W. R. & N. for Retention of Carshops There.

17 OFFICIALS BANQUETED

Business Men Numbering 160 Arrange Feast in "Train" Style. Headlights Blaze "Welcome." "Clear" Semaphore Appears.

THE DALLES, Or., Jan. 23.—(Special.)—When 17 officials of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company arrived in The Dalles at 7 o'clock tonight on their special train from Portland they saw Hotel Dalles, a block across the way, blazing forth in a glare of welcoming lights.

The route from the station to the hotel was lined with two strings of red, white and blue electric lights, and across the entrance to the hotel, in semi-circle form, lights of the same color spelled the large word "Welcome."

Big headlights and train indicators blinked at the railroaders from either side of the hotel, and a sign under illuminated official badge of the Union Pacific system over the door, on each side of which was a railroad semaphore. The one on the right was "in the clear" and the semaphore on the left indicated "danger" to anyone who didn't stay inside the hotel.

Following the officials into the banquet-room were 160 business men of The Dalles, who arranged the big function in honor of the officials. That the local hosts should honor the men who are at the head of the great railroad is easily explained.

Several months ago the railroad decided to move the carshops from this city to Sherman, 17 miles up the Columbia to make the divisions of the road more uniform in length. Business men of the city appealed to the officials, pointing out to them that the move would hurt The Dalles off from one of its largest payrolls and cause the removal of 600 of its 6500 citizens.

The officials reconsidered the subject after a committee had explained what a staggering loss the proposed removal would be to this city and after reasons were advanced whereby the promoters would be better off with the shops here.

The result was that the railroad officials recently decided not only to leave the shops in this city, but to enlarge them, spending $140,000 in The Dalles in this improvement work.

Naturally the Dallesites were happy and grateful, and still are, and so they decided to attempt to show their appreciation by honoring the officials with this banquet.

When the guests assembled from the hotel lobby in the dining-room they were confronted by Jack Allison, the conductor of the special train which brought the officials to the city.

Just outside one of the dining-room windows was a large locomotive bell. It was sounded loudly and then Local Agent Nelson at one end of the long festive board, which had been arranged around three sides of the room, started a little electric train, which really ran it went all the way around to the other end, where it reached the "new local roundhouse," where the train was turned around and sent on its return journey.

WIDOW'S HOME SAVED

NEW RULE BY RECLAMATION SERVICE AIDS SQUATTERS.

Representative Sinnott Procures Favorable Action in Case of Woman Barred From Entry.

KLAMATH FALLS, Or., Jan. 23.—(Special.)—Intervention by Representative Sinnott is reported to have saved Mrs. Thomas Wood her home and farm of 150 acres in the area withdrawn from entry in the Klamath project.

Ten years ago Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wood settled upon 160 acres of desert land near Malin in Southern Klamath County. They were not familiar with the land laws of the United States and did not realize that their settlement upon the land, which had been withdrawn from entry in the Klamath project, gave them no rights to the tract.

They converted this rough sagebrush land into a home, clearing the land, and succeeded in developing a farm. All the land is in cultivation, fenced and cross-fenced, and there is an orchard of 400 bearing fruit trees, a large garden and a berry yard.

When the reclamation service first came to the door, Mrs. Wood, who is 60 years of age, was in the hospital, and she was unable to appear before the reclamation service.

Representative Sinnott, who is a native of Klamath Falls, learned of the case and immediately secured a writ of habeas corpus from the Federal court at Malin, which ordered the reclamation service to allow Mrs. Wood to enter her land.

Representative Sinnott is reported to have secured a favorable decision from the Federal court at Malin, which ordered the reclamation service to allow Mrs. Wood to enter her land.

NEW ROAD BUILDING AT ASHLAND.

ASHLAND, Or., Jan. 23.—(Special.)—More than 25 workmen are now engaged on the upper scenic drive. The road by easy grades, reaches the height in the center of town, extends up the canyon on both sides for over a mile, and affords a splendid view of the city and valley. It will be available for teams and motor cars, and both branches of it will join the old roadway, which leads up through the canyon to the base of Mount Ashland. This municipal improvement, engineered under park and private auspices, will give steady employment to quite a force during the dull season.
