Shortly before noon the following message was given to Manager Thatcher, of the Western Union Company, by President Moore, of the exposition, addressed to President Wilson: "The Panama-Pacific International Exposition of 1915 is now ready. Those to whom the Congress of the United States, with the approval of the President, entrusted the great work of providing this celebration of the completion of the Panama Canal have performed their task with all the zeal and devotion of which they were capable. We offer our respectful homage to you and through you to the people of the Nation, and dare to express the hope that our patriotic endeavors will merit the commendation of our Government and the appreciation of mankind. "We now await your official opening tap by pressing the electric button, which will, by wireless telegraph operating across the continent, start the activities of our exposition. This will be the first time any exposition has been opened in this manner. "CHARLES C. MOORE."

raised their voices in cheer. Guns from the Army posts and men-of-war thundered forth the National salute of 21 guns and the long-awaited exposition was a reality. Crowd Seeks Amusement. As soon as the doors were opened in the various buildings, the crowd started to view the exhibits, which represented many millions of dollars. The Zone, which is one of the features of the exposition, where millions of dollars have been spent in providing amusement, seemed to be the Mecca for the larger part of the crowd. The reproduction of the Panama Canal proved to be one of the most popular of the many concessions. Just after the official opening ceremonies, the whirl of Lincoln Beachey's aeroplane was heard, and the daring aviator, circling the Tower of Jewels, 500 feet in the air, let loose several white doves over the grounds. Three times he made his famous loops, which brought forth tremendous cheers from the crowd. Before the last gun had been fired in the National salute, day-light fireworks were set off from the yacht harbor on the Marina. Everything Eatable Consumed. All afternoon the great stream of humanity, which was increased by thousands every hour, wended its way over every section of the 695 acres. Restaurants were obliged to send rush orders for more food, as everything eatable had been consumed long before 3 o'clock. As daylight faded, mines of electric lights flashed from every corner of the buildings, making night as bright as day. The Tower of Jewels, studded with 135,369 lights, flashed like a pillar of fire across the sky. The same spirit that characterized the rebuilding of San Francisco after the great fire of 1906 was shown throughout the first day of the greatest exposition of history. Modern Trench Fighting. There is an illusion, held with uncommon tenacity by the general public, that the range and effectiveness of modern arms tends to keep armies far apart. On the contrary, there is more hand-to-hand fighting today than at any time since gunpowder was invented. Many weapons long since thought obsolete have come into use again. First among these are grenades, of which there are all kinds, from man-water bottles or tin cans filled with old iron—a variety which is practically as effective. Some of them are carried in the hand, some on long poles. There are also the canister, which is nothing but a shell filled with very small shot, and the trench-mortar, meant to throw a shell short distance straight up into the air and down into the enemy's trench. For the last purpose I have seen wooden guns used, but I was never able to find out whether they worked on the principle of a sling, or the opinion that an improved type of trench-mortar would turn the scale a spring or an ailegun. I am personally in the attacker's favor.

LAND CALLS CITY FOLK

CHICAGO FAMILIES TO HAVE OPPORTUNITY IN TEXAS.

Government, Says Settlement Agent, Will Advance Money to Buy Implements, if Necessary.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—City dwellers tired of trying to wrest a satisfactory living from Chicago will have a chance to go back to the soil as a result of efforts of the United States Government, according to an announcement today by Albert G. Leonard, settlement agent of the Land Reclamation Office here. Mr. Leonard said he had accepted the proposals of owners of 168,000 acres of land near El Paso, Tex., to furnish homes to a large number of families. The first experiment would be made with 40 families, Mr. Leonard said. Forty parcels of 20 acres each would be set aside for settlement. The Government agent would select that number of families and the Government would build houses on the land and dig irrigation channels and wells. For the settlers' part, they would have to supply a horse or mule each and the necessary agricultural implements. One-half the yield of the land for several seasons would be accepted in full satisfaction of the purchase price, Mr. Leonard said. "If necessary, the Government will advance the money to buy implements," said Mr. Leonard. "It is a rare opportunity. This land will be worth $500 an acre within three years. One Chinese with one acre took $1000 out of it in a single celery crop last year. "The El Paso region is irrigated and has an ideal truck and fruit climate. Three crops can be raised there each year. If the experiment proves successful, other similar settlements will be made. Every big city can supply a quota of unemployed."
