R. G. HUNTER & CO.

I went to Seattle last Sunday to find out if I could buy a used car on the same basis as I am offering to the people of Portland—that is, in locating value from the inside out, and not the outside in—and I could not do it. I would refer the readers of this ad to the ads run in the Seattle Times and the Post-Intelligencer under the classified columns "AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE," Feb. 14, 1915. I could not attempt to take the space necessary in these columns to relate all of my experiences, as I spent all day endeavoring to buy a second-hand car where I could see and not have a salesman explain its condition to me. I secured some of the tags hung on the "perfect condition" cars and they supply all the facts relative to cars' condition, and you can either believe the tag and the salesman and buy or go to some other establishment and have the same "stuff" handed you again. Now, I will relate a few instances of myself buying a car under the supposition that I know nothing whatsoever of a car and I am placing my pocket book in the hands of a dealer in used cars to buy me a car, as all the men I met selling cars had evidently just been waiting for me to give me the benefit of the BIGGEST BARGAIN EVER OFFERED IN SEATTLE and that they would throw off all of their commissions and sell to me for just what they had to turn over to the owner, and they liked me, and so forth and so on, and would put themselves out to see that I secured a second-hand car that was better than new, and that the owner "was leaving the city and was compelled to sacrifice," and that in order to be sure that I did not lose this one and only wonderful opportunity, I HAD BETTER PLACE A SMALL DEPOSIT ON THE CAR and they would lay it aside for me. I tell you, READERS, that I lost thousands of dollars on the BARGAINS that I passed up on last Sunday in not buying the cars offered me, because, as one salesman said, "You can use the car for a year and bring it back here; I WILL SELL IT FOR MORE THAN I AM ASKING FOR THE CAR NOW." Well, here goes the first: For sale, by second-hand establishment, East Pike st. His ad states over two hundred cars to select from. (I couldn't see a hundred "automobiles." Here is the way his ad reads: "No matter what car you pick from the big list on my floor (he does not say STOCK of CARS) you may be sure of getting a genuine bargain. They will stand up under the most searching inspection (I saw some standing on blocks) and prove considerably better than the prices seem to indicate." That is part of the ad. Mr. Salesman waited on me and I finally became in love from his explanations with a Velie. Conversation ran this way: Condition? Excellent. Year? 1911. It was a 1910. Make of motor? Velie. Was a British-American. Made where? Detroit. Made in Moline, Illinois. Ignition system? Was not quite sure, but thought it was a Splitdorf. Was an Atwater Kent. Bore of cylinders? Didn't know. Semi, three-quarter or full-floating rear axle? Did not know for sure, but the Velie people made all of these parts. They do not. Made of transmission and where was it, in the rear-axle housing or amidship? Got down and looked under and said it was in the center. Price, $550. I suggested meekly that the car looked pretty well worn for that amount, when he assured me that it was the best BUY in the HOUSE and called my attention to the wind-shield, beautiful lines of the body, the fine headlights and that it cost new "$2800." They never built a car costing this amount of this type and model. Could I have a ride? Sure, with pleasure. Things were becoming hot now, as I had begun to fall for all of this without raising a dissenting voice.

They worked for 20 minutes to get it started and during this period of agony and arguments between Mr. Salesman and the floor man as to how to start the thing Mr. Salesman remarked that he had never had the least trouble in starting it previously, as he had started it a THOUSAND times before; but I guess from the quick gasp I gave he corrected himself by saying a FEW TIMES. It would not start, so the salesman, the floor man and myself acted as a self-starter. Pike street is very steep in front of this place, so we pushed the Perfect Car to the edge of the curb and the floor man took his position behind the wheel, knowing that great responsibility rested upon his narrow shoulders. We were given a rousing send-off down the hill and finally, after nearly rasping out what was left of the gears, we got a single cough from ONE CYLINDER. We did fine going down Pike street, but I did not want to walk back, so suggested we turn back while there was life in that one cylinder. We turned, BUT NOT BACK ON PIKE ST. The demonstrator knew of a round-a-bout way back to the salesroom where the per cent of grade was not so steep. We came steaming in, and when I say steam I mean HEAT. While it was a cool day and an open car, the HEAT made the passengers very comfortable. This is about all. I began to head for the door and then the prices began to drop. From $550 it went to four hundred without a pause, then I was made a flat offer to take it then and there for $350, so I made an offer of $300, and inasmuch as the owner was in Detroit and Mr. Proprietor was out driving, they could not close with me at three hundred, but if I could put up a DEPOSIT Mr. Salesman was quite certain that the car would be mine at that figure as soon as he could consult with Mr. Proprietor.

This is all for today. More coming next Sunday. I noticed in The Oregonian while I was reading it in Seattle that one second-hand establishment says that the reason why ours are bargains has been proven by our sales the last two weeks. I know of three cars that this concern has been advertising for many weeks in the past (refer to back issues in papers), and one they have had for nearly two years, that I sold before it ever came into their hands, and when it was first advertised for sale it was $900. I was told it was sold just a few days ago for $575 on time, and the buyer brought it over to my place to see if I could sell it for him again before his next payment became due, and in addition to the car he had just received a notice from an insurance company that the seller had put insurance on the car and charged the premium to him, which he said he would not pay, and that if I could not sell the car and get him something for his equity, that he intended to turn the car back to them and forfeit his first payment, which was close to being half the price. I would not have the outfit for what he paid as his first payment, because when I sold it previously to the late owners it was second-hand.

I will prove every word I make in the press and will prove value for every car I sell, because I AM the originator of the CHART system and the policy this company uses to PROVE VALUE, dollar for dollar, that is spent in a used car. We will educate you about an automobile before you spend a cent, just as the dealer does selling new cars.
